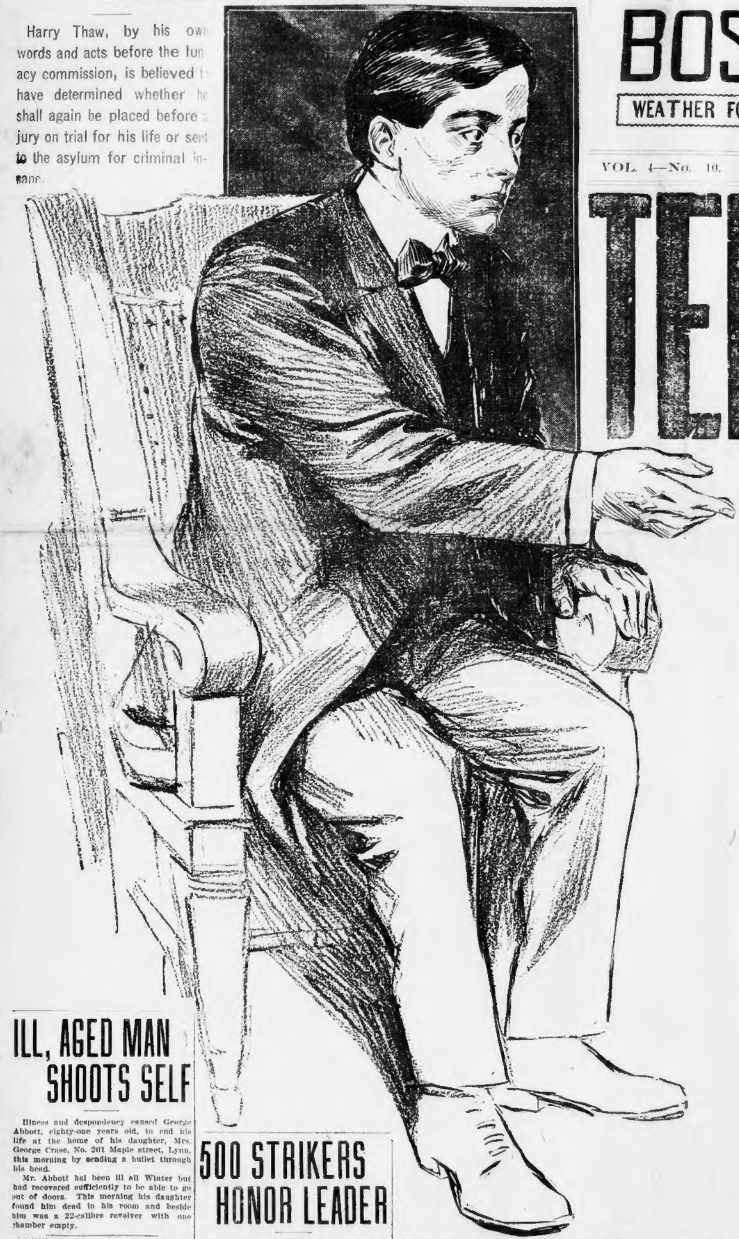
TEST OF SLAYER'S SANITY.

Harry Thaw, by his own words and acts before the lunacy commission, is believed to have determined whether he shall again be placed before a jury on trial for his life or sent to the asylum for criminal insane.



TELLS STORY OF TRAGEDY

Slayer of White Before Commission to Test His Sanity Recounts the Circumstances That Led to the Death of Stanford White.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Harry K. Thaw again took the stand to-day and continued his own dramatic version of the shooting of Stanford White, in his effort to convince the lunacy commission of his sanity.

Thaw has proven an excellent witness for his own cause, according to those coming from the courtroom. He has answered questions rationally and intelligently and even surpassed the expectation of his counsel.

His lawyers were very jubilant and said that they could not see any other outcome of the examination than a decision of sanity.

Mr. Delmas in particular appeared to be greatly elated, and a reflect of his cheerful frame of mind was the boutonniere of violets which he carried in his coat lapel. It was the first time since the beginning of the tial that he had come to court with any flower decoration.

Thaw's Remarkable Story

Thaw repeated the remarkable story which he told to Dr. Britton D. Evans, the alienist, and which was related by Dr. Evans on the witness stand.

Thaw's own narrative, based on Dr. Evans's sworn testimony.

"I have been subjected to the effects of a conspiracy. Lawyer Delafield of New York, and the firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge were in a conspiracy with Jerome to railroad me to an asylum. They wanted to declareme insane.

"It is all rot. There is nothing to it. They didn't want me to come through a trial where I might be vindicated, and where I might tell to a court and jury all that there is in this matter.

"White's friends desired this, and they had access to Mr. Delafield, and Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge, and even to the district attorney's office, and they were all in collusion to close the matter up quietly and to defeat any effort on my part or of my attorneys to show to the court and jury and to the world the infamous conduct of Stanford White.

"This man, the beast, the blackguard, sought to harm every pure minded woman that came in the sphere of his observation.

"I tried to save them—I tried to save them. I did all in my power to do so.

"I never wanted to shoot that man; I never wanted to kill him; I never had any desire to kill him.

Wanted to Expose Stanford White

"But I did want through legal means to bring him to trial. I wanted to

SUBMARINES LAUNCHED AT FORE RIVER

Before a throng of nearly a thousand people the two new submarines, Viper and Tarantula, were launched at the yards of the Fore River Ship & Engine Company at Quincy Point to-day. The Viper was the first to leave the ways.

At just 11 o'clock Mrs. L. Y. Spear, wife of the vice-president of the Electric Boat Company, builders of the two boats, broke the champagne across the bow of the Viper and she slid easily from the ways. Sixteen minutes later the Tarantula left the ways, christened by Mrs. George S. Radford, wife of the assistant naval constructor, stationed at the Fore River Yards, and daughter of Rear Admiral H. H. McCormack, retired.

The launching was private, and only a party of about twenty-five witnessed it from the yard. Nearly a thousand people, however, had collected on the Weymouth shore, where they saw the christening and launching.

Among those present by invitation were: Lieutenant E. R. Pollock, U. S. N.; Assistant Naval Constructor W. T. Watt, Commander Roger S. Wells, U. S. N.; Commander John L. Gow, U. S. N.; Lieutenant Daniels, General Inspector of Submarines, U. S. N., and Manager H. G. Smith, of the Fore River Ship and Engine Company.

FRENCH OCCUPY OUDJA.

OUDJA, Morocco, March 30.—General Liante, with a column of French troops, have occupied this city, and the Moorish Governer has announced that he feels very friendly toward the French government.

ILL, AGED MAN SHOOTS SELF

Illness and despondency caused George Abbott, eighty-one years old, to end his life at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Crase, No. 201 Maple street, Lynn, this morning by sending a bullet through his head.

Mr. Abbott hal been ill all Winter but had recovered sufficiently to be able to go out of doors. This morning his daughter found him dead in his room and beside him was a 22-calibre revolver with one chamber empty.

500 STRIKERS HONOR LEADER

Five hundred members of Locals Nos. 12, 13 and 26, Skirt and Garment Makers' Union, who have been on strike several days, marched to No. 40 Gold street, the home of Jacob Goldstein, their leader, to-day, escorted him to the strike headquarters at No. 46 Stillman street, and presented him a handsome wreath of lilies and roses, it being his thirty-fifth birthday.

After the presentation there were many speeches, the principal one of which was made by Mr. Goldstein, who urged on the strikers the importance of sticking together in their present fight.

"We have the sympathy of all organized labor," he said, "and we are bound to win."

CONSUELO TO COME IN APRIL

PARIS, March 30.—Although frequent denials have been made that the Duchess of Marlborough would visit the United States, it is now reported that the Duchess, accompanied by her two sons and her father, William K. Vanderbilt, will sail for America on April 16. She will spend some time in New York and Newport.

ROOSEVELT'S NIECE TO WED

NEW YORK, March 30.—Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Corinne Douglas Robinson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson and niece of President Roosevelt, to George Draper, youngest son of the late Dr. William Henry Draper, the scientist, and grandson of the late Charles A. Dana. No date has been set for the ceremony.

bring him before a court so that his infamous doings might be held up to the public and that he might be brought to justice and suffer for that which he had done.

"But Providence took charge of the situation. This was an act of Providence, and had it been my judgment I would have preferred for him to suffer the humiliation and all that comes from laying bare this matter of his doings before a court and before the public."

Asked what he did to bring the matter before the public, Thaw continued:

"I went to Mr. Comstock. I went to Mr. Jerome. I went to the Pinkerton and other detective agencies, and they reported back to me that Mr. Jerome said I had better let it drop; there was nothing in it.

"The detective agencies said that they would work further on it, but did not give a report which warranted me or enabled me to bring an action against him or have action brought against him in a court of law.

"Mr. Comstock did not give me any encouragement or do for me that which would enable me to bring the creature to justice.

"There was a prominent lawyer who was an adviser to White and at the same time was a counsel to Mr. Comstock for his society. This man was Delancy Nicoll. He was another link in the conspiracy. There was a general conspiracy between the District Attorney's office and White's influential friends. There was a Mr. P., who was a great friend of White. He was associated with White in questionable practices.

Was Advised to Carry a Pistol

"I carried a pistol because I was advised to do so by Roger O'Mara. Roger O'Mara had told me that I had better protect myself, after I told him that on several occasions thugs had jostled me and had endeavored to get me into a brawl.

These people were the hired agents of Stanford White, who hired the Monk Eastman gang and such people to get me into difficulties so they could kick me to death. But the shooting of a man is a terrible proposition. I wanted by legal process to bring him to justice but this act of Providence came in and settled the matter in this way.

"I applied to Mr. Comstock repeatedly and Mr. Comstock failed to make any response. I telephoned on one occasion to Mr. Comstock's office and some employe answered and seemed unwilling to do what I wanted done whereupon I gave hearty assurance that I would bear all the expense, but the only answer I got was that they would take care of their own business.

"Act of Providence"

"I had no thought of taking Stanford White's life, but when I came upon him in the roof garden theatre that night Providence took the mater out of my hands and removed Stanford White.

"I think that is the better way, because now he is permanently removed, while if he had gone to prison, he might be pardoned out after a time, and renew his practices."

THAW PARANOIAC SWEARS HAMILTON

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Immediately after Thaw's testimony, Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, one of Jerome's staff of expert alienists, took the stand and declared that in his opinion Stanford White's slayer is now insane, that he is an incurable paranoiac. That he is unable to advise with counsel.

Getting Dr. Hamilton before the board is Jerome's master stroke. He declared before Justice Fitzgerald when arguing for a commission that a five-minute examination of Dr. Hamilton would show Thaw ought not to be on trial for his life.

It is known Dr. Hamilton has a great deal of information as to Thaw's alleged predisposition to insanity, his wild actions during his past life, as well as what he observed in his examinations of the young millionaire.

To offset anything Dr. Hamilton may say the defence will ask the examination of the Tombs attendants, Warden Flynn and Dr. McGuire, the prison physician, to testify they have always found Thaw rational.

PETERS DENOUNCES FARCE OF TRIAL

By Rev. Madison C. Peters.

NEW YORK, March 30.—In the institution of a lunacy commission in the case of Harry Thaw is a sad commentary on American jurisprudence. It strikingly shows that we are far behind the times in regard to legal progress.

An individual is put on trial for the capital crime of murder; twelve of his peers, after infinite trouble, are chosen to give him a square deal; an array of lawyers is arranged on one side to prove his guilt to the satisfaction of the twelve, and a counter array on the other to endeavor to convince the twelve that he was justified in his act; a judge, supposed to be impartial to either side, and whose only office is to see that justice is conserved, presides, and at enormous expense to the taxpayers of New York county the farcical trial "drags its slow length along" for weeks, clogging the wheels of justice at every attempted revolution, when suddenly one man—the prosecutor—comes to the conclusion that judge, jury and lawyers, like Helen's Babies, never can make the wheels go round, and that the task must devolve on what is known as a lunacy commission.

Was there ever such a contretemps in a public court before? Truly it is laughable only for the ridicule and contumely it brings down upon us from our European cousins, and also for the hardships it entails upon our people in the payment of such a miscarriage of justice.

Joke on the People.

Certainly it is a huge joke, but alas! the joke is on Mr. Common People. The lawyers have the dancing, but the poor fellow has to pay the piper and pay him dearly. If Thaw is insane it looks as if he had a good many to bear him company. A great authority—none greater—the late Mr. Shakespeare, of well-known memory, said: "We are all fools at the best of times," but he might have gone a step further and said: "We are fools most of the time."

We allow ourselves to be imposed upon at every turn round. We lie down quiescent and with lamblike meekness allow the trusts and corporations to trample on us, rifle our pockets and then kick us out of sight; we pick ourselves up as best we can, scratch our heads and slink away like whipped curs. We are too great cowards to combine and arise in the might of indignation to hurl our taskmasters and slave drivers from the throne of Mammon, where they now sit and rule us with "whips of scorpions."

In like manner we allow our time and our money to be wasted for eight weeks, one seventh of a year, in trying, or endeavoring to try, a man whose case could have easily been disposed of in twenty-four hours or a week at the furthest.

Call England "Slow."

The other day, in London, a murderer was convicted and sentenced after a two days' trial, and only a month or so after he had committed the crime, yet in our stultification and imbecile ignorance we laugh at the "slowness" of England and pharisaically boast of our smartness. We are too obtuse to see that England and the whole of Europe have the "ha ha" on us.

What a want of logical commonsense we presented to the world in the conduct of the Thaw case. For two months a learned judge, a corps of distinguished lawyers and twelve men of supposed common sense have listened to the testimony for and against the prisoner, and moreover, the prisoner has been before their eyes six hours every day so that they might have studied his every movement, his every look and gesture, yet all these men—judge, jury, lawyers, experts and witnesses—are supposed to be unfit to determine what three men must decide.

In the name of common sense is it reasonable, is it logical, that three men who will have but little opportunity of seeing the defendant and who possibly cannot have the opportunity of listening to one-tenth the evidence adduced in court, can give a better opinion of the mental condition of Harry Thaw than the army of men who, day after day, for the past eight weeks, have studied him from every point of view and listened to all that was said for and against him.

Justice Fitzgerald, in his decision to appoint the lunacy commission, said that, in face of such opposing expert testimony, he did not feel competent to decide the issue.

Well, if he does not feel competent after presiding eight weeks, directing the testimony and looking upon Thaw every minute of every hour, how does he think that Mr. McClure or Mr. Olney will be able to decide after a few interviews with Thaw and listening to a few opinions regarding him? He must indeed have a high appreciation of their acumen and discernment.

Why Not Let Jury Decide?

The twelve men in the jury box, who were secured with so much trouble and time, appear to be men of good, strong common sense. In fact, they established this during their examination on the witness stand as talesmen, otherwise they would not have been accepted as jurors, but now the action of the presiding justice in taking the case out of their hands and placing it in those of three is simply tantamount to saying that they are fools, incompetent to decide the issue, and that three men are better than the twelve.

Unquestionably the opinion of three wise men is much to be preferred before the opinion of twelve fools, but very few, I think, will admit that the opinion of three wise men is to be preferred to the opinion of twelve wise men. By the inexorable laws of arithmetic the opinion of twelve wise men is exactly four times the value of the opinion of three wise men; therefore I think that Justice would have been quadruply subserved by letting the case proceed and go to the jury.

JOIN TO FIGHT GYPSUM TRUST

TOLEDO, O., March 30.—It is proposed to unite the independent gypsum interests of the United States to fight the United States Gypsum Company of Chicago, commonly known as the Gypsum Trust.

The interests involved include those of the Acme Company of St. Louis, American Gypsum Company of Port Clinton, O.; Niagara Gypsum Company of Buffalo and another Western concern. The consolidated companies will control a larger production than the trust.

SURGEON'S WIT DROVE DEATH FROM CYMRIC

"Surgeon Ashley Hopper's quick diagnosis of the outbreak of smallpox and his prompt isolation of the affected passengers on the White Star liner Cymric, on her last trip to Boston, saved the great transatlantic steamship line thousands of dollars," declared Dr. Hugo B. C. Riemer, of the Boston Immigration Station, to-day. The fifteen steerage passengers and the hospital steward, who have been in quarantine since the outbreak of the dread disease, were released to-day just before the Cymric left Boston, at 11 o'clock, on her regular trip to Queenstown and Liverpool.

Dr. Hopper, who is the Cymric's physician and surgeon, held an impromptu reception on the liner for over an hour before the ship left port. Officials of the line told him that his services had saved the Cymric from becoming a death ship on the voyage to Boston.

There were eighty-five saloon and 150 third-class passengers on the Cymric to-day, for European points. Among the prominent Bostonians aboard were Mrs. J. W. d'Arcy and her two children, Ferris Greenslet, R. A. Murray, John Lawrence and his two daughters, Hester and Mary, A. M. Shurtleff, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Quinn and their two sons, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Tudor.

SCHMITZ SEEKS TO CHECK BLOW AT FRANCHISES

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 30.—It is learned to-day that Mayor Schmitz has made overtures to several members of the Board of Supervisors to resign, in order that he may have an opportunity to appoint their successors.

Two members of the board are already under the mayor's control. They are Tweitmore and O'Neil. As they were only recently appointed, all the other sixteen are controlled by Assistant District Attorney Heney and the Grand Jury.

Schmitz could block any attempt to repeal the franchise granted by the confessed boodlers, provided he could secure three more members who would do his bidding. Supervisor Kelly said to-day:

"The present board of supervisors has no intention of resigning. Most of us would like to get out, but there is a big stick held over our heads. The grand jury will not permit us to resign. We are more than willing."

The report that the investigation of official corruptness would be halted for lack of funds is denied by Rudolph Spreckels.

PRESIDENT'S EARLY CALLER BEHIND BARS

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Charles A. Riley, who says he came in from Rock Springs, Md., on a freight train at 3 o'clock this morning, called at the White House to see the President at 6.

"The President summoned me by wireless telegraph," said Riley. "I am here and would like to see him at once." Officer Bramlett conveyed Riley to police headquarters, where he will be held for examination.

ANARCHISTS HEAD REVOLT IN BALKANS

Roumanian Peasants, Led by Russian Agitators, Renew Battle for Freedom.

WOMEN SLAIN BY TROOPS

BUCHAREST, Roumania, March 30.—Roumania is being flooded with anarchistic manifestos and proclamations. Many of these show their Russian origin, proving the part agitators from that country are playing in the revolutionary troubles here. The proclamations urging the people to rise are displayed in all public places.

Stirred up by these manifestos, the peasants are preparing to destroy the forests in the upland regions. They are convinced that if the property is destroyed the great landlords will not seek to resume possession.

To-day's advices show that disorders continue in many parts of the country. The activity of the troops in bombarding rebellious villages, however, has had a quieting effect.

The terrible execution of peasants has taught the survivors a lesson. Thousands of refugees are still fleeing from the disturbed districts.

It is stated that every rebel town and village has been bombarded into ruins. One hundred and forty houses at Vleru have been demolished, and more than 200 peasants were killed. Two neighboring villages were razed and all their inhabitants killed. Many women among the rebels have shared the same fate as the men. The soldiers and peasantry are reported to be vying in cruelty. The mutual atrocities seldom have been equalled in Balkan records.

EDDY ENEMIES DESERT PLAINTIFFS IN SUIT

Professor Kent Abandons Cause, and Other Defections May Follow When Case Is Called Tuesday.

CONCORD, N. H., March 30.—Developments in the Eddy case to-day indicate that when the case is taken into court here next Tuesday the plaintiffs will be found to have lost some of the adherents they had when the suit was begun.

It became known to-day that John F. Kent, former principal of the Concord High School and Mrs. Eddy's nearest neighbor, has left the supporters of the plaintiffs. Until now he has been regarded as one of the plaintiffs' strongest witnesses. Now he has gone over to the defence.

Although he was one of the persons who signed affidavits last Fall, which were used in the beginning of the campaign against Mrs. Eddy, he said to-day that he was no longer to be counted upon as a helper in the attack.

He communicated with Frank Streeter, Mrs. Eddy's personal counsel, a few hours after he had refused to discuss the hours after he had refused to discuss the situation with an agent of the plaintiff's counsel.

The defection of Mr. Kent has revived a rumor which was current here several weeks ago to the effect that Mrs. Eddy's son, George W. Glover, had decided to withdraw from the case, in which he figures as one of the plaintiffs.

CONFIDENT OF REFUTATION.

Nathaniel Martin, one of the local attorneys for the plaintiffs, said to-day that although he had heard the rumor, that he knew it was untrue and that Glover was still in the ranks of the plaintiffs. By Mrs. Eddy's lawyers it was denied that any attempt has been made since the filing of the suit to influence any of the plaintiffs to withdraw.

Mrs. Eddy and her friends are so confident that the claims of the plaintiffs will be destroyed by the document which is to be filed in her behalf in the Superior Court here Tuesday next, that it is regarded as unnecessary to try to alienate any of the plaintiffs.

Mr. Kent, who lives across Pleasant street from Mrs. Eddy's home, and from whose windows everybody who enters or leaves Pleasant View can be seen, said to-day:

"Last October I was asked to make an affidavit in support of the contention that Mrs. Eddy in her daily drive was impersonated by Mrs. Pamelia Leonard.

"That request was the first of a series of unfortunate occurrences with which I have against my will been connected in this case.

STATEMENTS MAGNIFIED.

"I could not go as far as the enemies of Mrs. Eddy desired that I should. For instance, I knew that Mrs. Eddy was alive while some of those who were attacking her had declared that she was dead, and that an imposter was at Pleasant View in her place.

"What little information I did give was distorted and magnified. It was made to appear that I was an accuser of Mrs. Eddy, while as a matter of fact I had gone no farther than to express distrust of some of the persons who had gained her confidence.

"Then there was spread among my acquaintances a story to the effect that when I first decided to build this house, Mrs. Eddy sent me $500 with the message that I accept it as a gift and apply it upon the house. I was said to have resented this offer so keenly that I became an enemy of Mrs. Eddy on the spot.

"This story, which some of my acquaintances were foolish enough to believe, was ridiculous and without truth.

"I found that my position had been so misconstrued by some of those who were interested in this legal attack upon Pleasant View that I decided to abandon the affair entirely. I have since the beginning of this suit been approached by representatives of the plaintiffs, who wanted help, and this help I have refused to give.

"I am out of it, and I want to stay out."

"HELLO" GIRLS ON BACK BAY CALL STRIKE

A dozen girl operators on the night shift at the Back Bay exchange of the New England Telephone & Telegraph struck last night on account of a new rule which practically amounts to a reduction of pay. The strike threatens to become general in the metropolitan district if the rule is not rescinded.

The night operators have formerly had two days off a month with full pay. By the new rule their pay will be docked if they take the two days or one day off. Reductions of late in the price of telephone tariffs is said to be responsible for this, the company squaring itself for the decreased revenues by making the girl operators on the night shifts pay for part of it.

HAT MAY IDENTIFY DEAD MAN'S BODY

PORTLAND, Me., March 30.—The finding of a hat may lead to-day to the identification of the body of a well-dressed man, which was found under Portland bridge Wednesday night. The band in the hat was marked with a Washington, D. C., store tag and the initials "W. C. B."

PRESIDENT TO TRY TO AVERT GREAT STRIKE?

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, March 30.—The railroads last night declared that they had conceded everything possible and the union representatives asserted that further concessions would have to be made or to-day's meeting would fail to prevent a strike.

The Government officials will find their efforts at conciliation somewhat difficult, owing to news telegrams from Washington which state that the administration believes the railroads have offered very substantial increases and the employes should accept them. It is also hinted that if conciliation fails and a strike becomes imminent President Roosevelt will step in and try to stop it.

Two conferences will be held in the Auditorium to-day for the purpose of urging concessions to avert the strike. At 11 o'clock the employes' committee will meet Chairman Knapp of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Commissioner of Labor Neill to talk over the situation. Later the two government officials will meet the general managers' committee for the same purpose.

The object of these conferences is to give the government officials, who are acting merely as mediators, a history of the negotiations, the cause of the break and the stand that will be taken by both sides in the future.

1907 MAINE SOLONS BREAK A RECORD

AUGUSTA, Me., March 30.—The appropriations by the seventy-third Legislature amounted to $6,287,539, exceeding those of the seventy-second session by $1,547,345, or nearly one-third. This is the record for eight years.

CATHOLICS OF CITY OBSERVE HOLY SATURDAY

Holy Saturday was observed with masses and special ceremonies in Catholic Churches throughout the city to-day. The altars, deprived of their ornaments on Maundy Thursday, were clothed again, and a new fire was blessed to illuminate them.

The Paschal candle was lighted, representing the resurrection of the Savior, and the lighting of the other candles and lamps portrayed the ressurrection of the faithful on the last day. The blessing of the holy water used in administering several of the church's sacraments, the reading of the prophecy, the chanting of the litanies and the celebration of solemn high mass concluded the exercises in each church.

At the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, the rector, the Rev. John T. Mullen, D. C. L., officiated, assisted by the Rev. James McCarthy and the Rev. John Crane, D. D. The Rev. Thomas MacCormick, chancellor of the New England archdiocese, was master of ceremonies.

Elaborate programs of Easter music will be given in city churches to-morrow.

TRAIL WOMEN IN NEW YORK AS ABDUCTORS

Real Estate Man Believes Marvin Boy Held in Apartment House.

DETECTIVES ON THE CLUE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 30.—A clue received by Dr. Horace N. Marvin, which indicated that his boy was being held on the East Side, resulted in several detectives being sent to that section of the city to-day.

The clue came in a long distance telephone message from New York to Dover. A well-known real estate dealer living in the Bronx sent the message. "I am sure I know where your boy is," he said. "You had better come to New York at once. A client of mine has told me that he is certain the boy is being held on the East Side. This client is an employe of an apartment house. He said that the child was brought to the house by two women."

When Dr. Marvin received the message he at once ordered that detectives be put to work on the New York clue.

One Letter a Hoax.

The receipt of a transcript of the following letter which Dr. Marvin forwarded to the local police caused much excitement: "Go to No. 143 East Twenty-fifth street, New York, and get your boy.

"BRUNER."

Detectives were hurriedly sent to the address given, but they were disappointed in finding that not only was the number that of an office building, but also that nobody of the name of "Bruner" was known in that neighborhood.

New Outrage at Dover.

Intense excitement prevails in Dover over another outrage which is supposed to have been committed by the kidnappers of Horace N. Marvin, the baby son of Dr. H. N. Marvin.

Miss Lucy Killen, the teacher of the Logan school, who two days ago was threatened by two men whose conversation she had overheard while on her way home, found on opening the school house yesterday that the whole interior had been wrecked.

A notice resembling one of the "Black Hand" missives posted on the door bore the words: "Beware. You have told."

In one corner was a skull and crossbones and in another a coffin pierced with a dagger.

As soon as Miss Killen reported the matter, Superintendent Dimao of Baltimore, who has been in charge of the detectives here, was hastily recalled from Philadelphia. He left last night for the Marvin home. The detectives have again taken up the theory that the boy is concealed near here and for the next few days all their efforts will be concentrated on the search of every possible hiding place in the vicinity.

PROBE POISON MYSTERY IN SISTERS' DEATH

Lowell Police Guard Developments in the McDermott Tragedy.

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, March 30.—Determined that the mystery surrounding the deaths of Bridget and Winifred McDermott, who were found poisoned at their home, No. 103 Lawrence street, must be solved, the police and Medical Examiner Meigs are collecting every scrap of evidence to present to District Attorney Peters.

It is known the police inspectors are trying to ascertain whether there was left at the house at any time during the week any sort of a package for the girls which might have contained poison powders of some kind.

Died in Agonies.

Bridget McDermott was in the habit of buying a headache powder which the druggist said contained a considerable quantity of acetanilide, plainly marked on the package. Whether this powder mixed with some cider, which was purchased at a grocery store across the street, caused the poisoning has not been determined.

Dr. Meighs told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that the autopsies showed that the poison must have been extremely virulent to have caused death in the form which it did. Bridget was so powerfully effected that she did not have the strength to rise from the bed, although suffering intense agony.

Winifred managed to rise and start for the door, but fell to the floor, where she died, her fingers dug tightly into the carpet.

Funeral To-morrow.

Nothing was heard by the other people in the house except groans which were only loud enough to cause the suspicion that some one had a slight attack of nightmare.

The viscera was taken by Dr. Meigs to Professor Whitney of Harvard, who will make an immediate chemical analysis. Dr. Whitney's report is expected either late tonight or the first thing Monday morning. Until that arrives the authorities work in the dark in their efforts to fathom the mystery.

To-morrow the sisters will be buried from the home on Lawrence street. Services will be held at St. Peter's Church at 2 o'clock. All their associates in the Middlesex Mills will attend the funeral. To-day the house has been besieged by sympathetic friends.

A brother and a sister are left in Lowell. The parents are in Ireland.

STAHL'S BODY NOW AT FORT WAYNE HOME

Special to the Boston American.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., March 30.—Early to-day the body of Charles (Chick) Stahl, whose tragic death Thursday startled the baseball world, arrived at his home, which was purchased for his family with money that he earned because of his great prowess on the diamond.

Mrs. Barbara Stahl, the mother of the dead player, was prostrated when she looked upon the face of her son to-day. Her grief knew no bounds, and at one time it was feared that she would become hysterical.

"I simply can't believe he is dead," wailed the mother of the famous diamond star. "He was always so good natured and happy. I simply can't believe that he would take his own life in the way he did."

The funeral to-morrow will be conducted under the auspices of both the Fort Wayne Lodge of Elks and the Fort Wayne Aerie of Eagles.

Mrs. Charles S. Stahl, the wife of the dead player, arrived from Roxbury, Mass., accompanied by her mother and sister, late last night. She constantly repeated:

"I could have saved Charley if I had only remained with him."

The body was placed on a bank of flowers sent to him by his team-mates of the Boston American club. Large floral pieces were also received from many of the other ball clubs. Telegrams have been hourly arriving, and there are expressions of sorrow and condolence from every team in the country.

RE-ENACTS, IN SLEEP, MURDER

SIBLEY, Ia., March 30.—After having twice been sentenced to be hanged for the killing of August Schroeder, Charles Rocker is again on trial for the crime. The slain man, a farmer, was Rocker's employer. His body was found hanging from a rafter in his barn five years ago. The Coroner's jury's verdict was suicide.

A year after the fatality Schroeder's widow married Rocker. One night, she says, she was awakened and saw Rocker sitting up in bed with a pillow clutched tightly in his hands. He cried "I'll kill you, August, I'll kill you! There, why don't you die?"

Mrs. Rocker next morning accused him of the crime and she says, he coolly confessed.

"Dear Mr. Stork—Please bring Frances Stevens a Baby Boy, a White Baby. Do you bring Clothes, too?

"Yours truly,

"FRANCES STEVENS.

"P. S.—I like you mr. stork."

Mr. Loughman, touched by the appeal, wrote a reply, which said:

"Dear Little Friend—We are out of babies now, but expect a new lot in soon. We shall not forget you when they come.

NEW HEAD OF HAIR AT 100

GREENFIELD, Ind., March 30.—"Grandma Clayton is growing a full suit of black hair," was the announcement made to-day concerning Mrs. Ruth Clayton, the oldest resident of Hancock County, 100 years old, and many of the pioneer friends called upon her and were astonished to see the change that had come over her.

Following a short spell of illness a few weeks ago, Mrs. Clayton lost her hair, which was silvery. A few days ago her hair began to grow again.

Mrs. Clayton is planning for a horseback ride to Spring Lake Park on her next birthday.

WINTHROP WARRING OVER POLICE CHIEF

Selectmen's Removal of Old Head Creats Biggest Storm Town Ever Knew.

HELD POSITION 13 YEARS

The summary removal from office of Chief of Police William E. McNeill of Winthrop by the newly elected selectmen, Delos M. Bristol, Brendan Keenan and William Sanby, has rent the already widely-parted political forces in Winthrop still farther asunder, and the mutterings of a municipal storm the like of which the old town on Pullen Point has never known are in the very air.

On April 6, Chief McNeill, for almost thirteen years the head of the Winthrop police force, must give way to Ernest R. Buffington, a Winthrop hotel man and Boston real estate dealer.

"'We haven't a thing against you,' Selectmen Bristol told me," says Chief McNeill.

"'Why must I get out?' I asked the Selectmen last Monday when they told me I was to go," said Chief McNeill to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

"'I have talked with a friend of yours and we have decided that you would better resign,' Mr. Bristol said to me.

"'Have you got anything against me?' I asked.

"'No, Chief, we haven't,'" was the answer.

Wouldn't Resign.

"'Then I won't resign,' I said, and that's why they have fired me out. I told them that they had followed my official career and they all knew me and I defied them to say anything against me.

"I told Chief McNeill that for certain things which I know, and of which I told him and which I am satisfied that he would not desire to have made public, we had removed him," says Delos M. Bristol, chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

"It's politics," Charles Cammal, a director of the Winthrop Town Government Association, has said.

"I will not deny," said Mr. Bristol, "that the Winthrop Town Government Association, which won the last town election, is determined to have the police force in harmony with it and its intentions. Our cause, that of good government, must be aided, even in this way, and in one year the people of Winthrop will be glad we have acted as we did.

"Too Much Gambling."

"I dislike to talk about this, but to show that we have cause I can tell you that there is too much gambling about this town and that boys and very young men have been engaged in it. I complained to Chief McNeill more than once about this before I could get him to make any move. The other reasons, aside from the political good to be accomplished I will not make public, and for this McNeill will thank me."

"I know nothing at all about it personally," said D. L. White, the president of the Winthrop Town Government Association, in the comfortably furnished basement of his cottage in Neptune avenue, called nowadays in Winthrop "the throne room" by certain persons who think that most of the affairs of the town are decided there.

"Whatever the selectmen decide I will stand back of. The cause is too important for its bein gobstructed and if the selectmen think that changes in the force of the police is necessary on this account they should be made. I have nothing at all against Mr. McNeill personally."

"We'll make a political machine out of the police force," Mr. Cammal has said.

Didn't Seek Job.

"I never sought the position," said Ernest R. Buffington, at the New Winthrop Hotel, where he is a guest. "I told the selectmen when I was approached that I would accept it if there was a vacancy, but that I would not be a candidate.

"I will make the force as nearly a model as I can in point of efficiency. It is to be removed entirely from the field of politics. I will insist upon the best of discipline, and, if the Selectmen allow me, I will have call boxes placed in different parts of the town from which the men shall report to headquarters. I shall have the men drill and seek to modernize the force."

"All the good we fellows did in putting this Town Government Association into power down here is shattered by the removal of Chief McNeill," William G. Orcutt, one of the prime workers for the association, has said.

"Chief McNeill made a good and efficient officer, but it's too late to cry over spilled milk," said Fred Hall, proprietor of Crest Hall. "Personally I would have liked it had the chief been allowed to remain, but I am willing to wait to see what Mr. Buffington will do before I say anything more."

Arrested Chauffeur.

"I arrested D. I. White's chauffeur last September 25, and he never forgot nor forgace me," said Chief McNeill. "The selectmen take their orders from him. Samuel L. Barrabee, Mr. White's chauffeur, was fined $10 in the lower court for speeding. The case was appealed. That's why they are after me.

"This force of officers never mixed in politics, and they know it, but I guess they want a gang of their own. I know, at least that they want a chief they can order around. I know nothing as to what will happen to the nine men I have under me."

"Its too bad," said G. W. Sullivan, a retired Winthrop business man. "It may be god government, but it's poor judgment. I think the selectmen will find that before the year is over that many others think as I do."

Chief McNeill has been a member of the Winthrop police force for fifteen years and chief for nearly thirteen years of that time.

GOVERNMENT HALTS BIG R. R. STRIKE

CHICAGO, March 30.—Strike preparations in the clash between the Western railroads and the trainmen are halted today by the arrival of Martin A. Knapp, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Charles P. Neill, United States Commissioner of Labor, emmissaries of the government in a mission of mediation.

"We have stopped all progress in our arrangements for strike," said A. B. Gerretson, grand chief of the conductors.

"The government has asked us to maintain a truce with the railroads until its agents have an opportunity to bring about an amicable adjustment of our differences."

CROSSED CANADIAN BORDER, ARRESTED

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., March 30.—Deputy Sheriff W. S. Worthen has arrested a Russian woman and her two children, who are charged with violating the immigration laws. They were brought across the Canadian border from St. John, N. B., by a Swanton, Vt., man who, it is said, promised to see that they would not be molested.

EASTER FAIR BUT COLDER, IS PROMISED

Gay Gowns and Plume-Bedecked Hats May Be Worn Without Fear of Damage.

SO THE WEATHERMAN SAYS

"Fair and colder to-night and to-morrow. Light westerly winds."—Official weather forecast.

Milliners may now work overtime and messenger boys will be "worn to a frazzle" delivering rush packages to-night for Easter will be fair 'tis predicted. "Fair from ocean to ocean," said Weather Forecaster Smith, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific fair femininity will have a chance to be on parade without worrying about the weather.

"It will be a little bit chilly but fair nevertheless," says the weather prophet. "Let me see, there is a little bit of a cold wave on the way, but nothing to hurt. All the storms have been sidetracked and sent scurrying up North toward the pole where Easter hats don't count.

The thermometer ought to commence business to-morrow morning at about say thirty-five degrees. From there it should get up to about fifty, and olng towards night it will drop again slightly. But there is but a small chance of the sun being hidden."

GIRL 'AFRAID,' BALKS AT ALTAR

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 30.—"No I won't; I won't get married. I've changed my mind. Take me back to mamma. I love you, Arthur, and I'd like to, but——"

Miss Geraldine McCormick, eighteen years old, refused to carry out her part of the programme here, in a drama in which Arthur Rupp, twenty-two years old, living in Chicago, was cast for the hero's part. The couple came here from Chicago to get married. Miss McCormick had defied her parents, who opposed the match.

When the Justice was about to make them one, the near-bride rebelled.

"What did you come down here for, then?" protested Rupp.

"But I'm afraid, I'm afraid to get married," replied the heroine.

No amount of pleading and argument could induce Miss McCormick to alter her mind.

Why Pay More Than Is Asked At The Bargain Centre of Boston?

NATIONAL HEAD OF TEAMSTERS TO LEAD FIGHT

Cornelius Shea Arrives To-day in Boston to Take Charge of the Teamsters' Strike.

BIG MEETING TO-MORROW

Cornelius P. Shea, international president, and Thomas L. Hughes, international secretary-treasurer of the teamsters' union, arrive in this city to-day to direct the anticipated strike next Wednesday of the big General Truck Teamsters' Union No. 25.

Last Sunday the union voted to give the executive board power to call strikes next Wednesday morning at the barn of every firm which then has not signed the union's new wage scale and working agreement.

Another Big Meeting.

To-morrow afternoon at Brodbine Hall the 5,000 members of the union will have another meeting, at which further details regarding the scale and the union's action will be taken, and which meeting will be addressed by President Shea and Secretary Hughes.

When there has been trouble between the unions and the employing teamsters in previous years, the men have made their agreements with the Master Teamsters' Association. In this case, however, the association has declined to act as a whole and has left the settlement of the difficulty with the individual members.

Dissension Among Employers.

This is taken to mean by the union men that there is dissension in the association. They have also heard that some of the Master Teamsters have joined the employers' association which was formed in this city to resist union demands of all kinds.

While President Shea and Treasurer Hughes are in Boston they will establish temporary international headquarters and will undoubtedly attend to several of the eastern troubles.

FACE ANOTHER THEFT CHARGE

Richard Hilliard and Bertram Bannister, the two men arrested on Hancock street, Dorchester, on charge of robbing the house of Inspector Walker A. Smith, were held in $3,000 each in the South Boston court to-day on the charge of robbing the apartment house at No. 40 I street last Monday afternoon.

The flats occupied by Harvey Kenlston, Richard Hutch and Joseph Dewaele were broken into and jewelry valued at $350 stolen. Each is now under a total of $6,500 bonds. They are suspected of other burglaries in East Boston, Somerville and Newton.

HUB LOCAL OPTION BILL TO COME UP

The Legislature next week will have before it a proposition slicing Boston into eight districts and giving each district local option on the question of granting saloon licenses within its borders. The Committee on Liquor Laws voted yesterday, 6 to 5, to report such a bill. It had been largely and strenuously backed by suburban interests, supporting Representative Harry Ham of Dorchester, the youngest member of the House.

PEOPLE TAKING FEWER PATENT MEDICINES

Try This at Home for the Backache and Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism.

ANY ONE CAN MIX THIS

A well-known authority states that there are more cases of kidney trouble here now than ever before, while recent reports show that more people succumb each year to some form of kidney disease than any other cause.

When there is sickness, examine the urine. Rheumatism is only a symptom of kidney trouble. It is nothing more or less than excessive uric acid in the blood, which the sluggish inactive kidneys have failed to sift out, leaving it to decompose and settle about the joints and muscles, causing intense suffering; frequently resulting in deformity; often reaching the heart, when death ensues.

Pains across the back, frequent, painful and suppressed urination and other symptoms of weak bladder are not the only signs of kidney trouble; many cases of stomach disease, headache, pain in the heart, inactive liver, etc., are but symptoms, the cause of which can be traced to feeble, clogged kidneys.

The physicians for the insurance companies always carefully examine and report on the condition of the urine. It is a certain sign of sickness or health of the human body.

A test of the urine should be made by every man and woman at least once each year. A simple test is to void a small quantity of urine in a bottle or glass and let it stand over night; next morning, if there is a reddish brick-dust sediment, or white, fleecy substance present, either consult some reputable physician or take a good vegetable treatment. The following prescription is recommended highly in these cases, and if desirable the sufferer can mix it at home. Any good prescription pharmacy has the ingredients, which are harmless and inexpensive: Compound Kargon, one ounce; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. Where any of the symptoms enumerated above are present, good results are sure to follow immediately the use of this simple prescription.

COMES TO HEAD GREAT STRIKE.

Cornelius P. Shea, international president of Teamsters' Union, accompanied by Thomas L. Hughes, international secretary-treasurer, arrive to-day in Boston to lead truckmen's fight for better wages.

WEDS SECRETLY RICH WIDOW IN AUTO ROMANCE

As a result of a pretty auto romance, Russell Taylor Green, called "Russ" in Boston auto circles, and Mrs. Minnie A. Davis, a handsome and wealthy widow, are said to have been married secretly in Providence. Mr. Green, who is twenty-three years old, first met Mrs. Davis, whose age is given as thirty-four on the marriage license books in Providence, at the Boston Auto Show a year ago and it was a case of love at first sight. Mr. Green and his brother have had apartments in the same house with Mrs. Davis at No. 33 Gainsboro street. It is said that Mr. Green has furnished a pretty little suite on Normandy street, Dorchester, where he will take his bride on their return to Boston.

EXPECT ROYAL HEIR IN APRIL

MADRID, March 30.—The physicians in attendance on Queen Victoria have reason to believe that she may have an heir sooner than has been anticipated, and it has been recommended that King Alfonso curtail his visit to Cartogena to meet King Edward.

The middle of April is now set as the date of arrival.

'DIG DITCH OR BUST'--CANNON

HAVANA, March 30.—"We'll dig the ditch or bust," Uncle Joe Cannon told the reporters when the steamer Bluecher reached here from Colon, having on board the congressional party which has just visited the isthmus.

The Hon. James A. Tawney, chairman of the House appropriation committee, says that the construction of the canal is a far more simple problem than American people have been led to believe. The proposition is simply one of digging and handling the material.

AS "BLACK HAND" SLAYERS, HOLD SIX

NEW YORK, March 30.—The American Missionary Association is the first organization in the country which has voted to celebrate the centennial of the birth of Whittier, on December 17. The executive committee will ask Congregational churches to unite in this celebration.

CONTEST OVER LEASE DELAYS CITY LIGHTING

Arrangements for the assumption by the city of the gas and naphtha lamp lighting now done under contract by the Rising Sun Lighting Company have been delayed, and now it is believed that it will at least be April 15 before the city takes over the work, instead of April 1, as originally planned.

The civil service commissioners have agreed to let the 116 lamplighters now in the employ of the Rising Sun company enter the city's employ without examination, but there is a delay over the terms under which the city is to lease the equipment of the street lighting company.

The Rising Sun Street Lighting Company now receives $28.20 a light per year for gas lights and $29.20 a light per year for naphtha lamps. It lights slightly over 10,000 of the former and 1,600 of the latter. The seven-year contract under which it operated expired June 30.

KENTUCKIAN TO WED HUB GIRL

As a prelude to her homecoming from a trip around the world, the engagement is announced of Miss Anna Tucker Phillips, a beautiful society girl of this city, to Raynal C. Bolling of New York.

Mr. Bolling is by birth a Kentuckian, but has been for some years connected with one of the leading law firms of New York, and is actively engaged in looking after the interests of a large steel company.

FISHERMEN WIN VICTORY

Led by Representatives Thomas J. Grady and William L. V. Newton of Boston, the forces that have led the fight for the fishermen of Boston and other Massachusetts harbors, have finally shoved through the House the Senator Dixon bill, authorizing the taking of clams and quohogs for bait from contaminated waters.

Senator Dixon got the original bill through the upper body without serious opposition. In the House, Grady and Newton had a five-days fight, finally accepting an amendment providing for a fine of from $10 to $50, and a permit from the local board of health. Now the measure as amended must be acted upon in the Senate.

TRAVELERS' SOCIETY OUT OF BUSINESS

GERRY BROWN LASHES TURTLE AND STREETER

Rousing Address in Adams Stirs the Labor Men to Enthusiasm.

LEGISLATION IS SCORED

Special to the Boston American.

NORTH ADAMS, March 30.—Scathing denunciation of Representatives A. H. Streeter of Adams and William Turtle of Pittsfield and the highest praise for Senator Thomas F. Cassidy of Adams were the features of a rousing address by E. Gerry Brown, former candidate for Lieutenant-Governor on the Independence League and Democratic tickets, at a rousing labor meeting at Adams last evening. Germania Hall was packed to the doors and the greatest excitement prevailed as the town is just now deep in the throes of politics in preparation for the town meeting Monday.

The other speakers were ex-Senator William M. Osgood of Lowell and Joseph Ashworth of Adams, a candidate for the Prudential Committee, who charged that one newspaper had sold out the labor interests a year ago for $25.

Brown Lashes Legislature.

John Kenyon, president of the Central Labor Union of Adams, presided and introduced Mr. Brown as the first speaker. Mr. Brown immediately plunged into a criticism of several of the Berkshire County legislators and a general denunciation of the Legislature for its general attitude toward labor interests, both this year and in the past. He said in part:

"Labor has found it necessary to organize in order to obtain justice and right. The laboring man is the wealth producer, capital is the wealth distributor.

"The greatest opportunity for labor to gain its ends is in the Legislature, where, if that body were honest and upright, the just demands of the workingmen as against those of capital would be given equal consideration, but the laboring interests are not given equal consideration in that body. They have never been.

"It has been only through the greatest effort that anything favorable to labor interests has ever been secured in the Legislature.

"Representative A. H. Streeter has shown by his vote on the recess bill that he is unfriendly to labor. It is too bad that he defeated last year a laboring man who would have made a stand favorable to the labor element last Thursday.

"William Turtle of Pittsfield may be described as a 'turn turtle.' He has shown himself best fitted to forward a movement favorable to those opposed to organized labor. With Mr. Streeter he is probably looking for appointment as one of the fifty commissioners who are to receive $900 each to investigate the injunction bill and other labor measures."

Senator Cassidy an Honest Man.

"Senator Thomas F. Cassidy, a distinguished citizen of this town, is one of the most honest men who ever sat in the Legislature, one who is convincing in his manner and in whom honesty is innate. If this district only had as good a Representative as it has a Senator there would be no occasion for this address."

Discussing the recess bill, he declared that it is because the members of the Legislature do not dare to face the issue.

"The Representatives say that the real trouble is that they do not know what labor wants. The real reason for their action is that they know exactly what labor wants and demands. I do not wish to break into local politics, but laboring men should be thoroughly organized here that they may become a part of the great force which would give less opportunity for injustice in all legislative matters."

DIG UP ARMY CHEST OF '76

WHITEHALL, N. Y., March 30.—An old wrought iron army chest which was used by George Washington during the Revolutionary War to carry the Continental money with which to pay the troops has just been unearthed near Poultney, Vt., and is in the possession of Dr. E. D. Ellis of that town.

After the battle of White Plains, Washington gave the chest to Beverly Robinson of Newburgh. A descendant of Robinson gave it to a relative in Poultney, but during a fire many years ago it was stolen and lost track of.

CLOSE MILL, NOT GIRLS ENOUGH

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 30.—Owing to the impossibility of getting girls enough to work in its factory here, the New England Paper Goods Company announces that the factory will be moved to Boston.

Thirty girls have been employed and good wages have been paid.

The company officers say they must move where they can have a good labor market.

HEIR TO EHRET MILLIONS DIES

NEW YORK, March 30.—By the death of Frank A. Ehret, oldest son of George Ehret, the millionaire brewer, of apoplexy is brought to an end the career of a man who has figured prominently before the public in many exciting and interesting experiences during the last twenty years. Frank Ehret risked his father's displeasure often, but always managed to win back his parent's favor.

His most serious affair was his marriage, in 1898, to Anna Dare, a burlesque actress, from whom he was divorced two years later. Ehret was slated for a Tammany nomination for Congress, but his marriage changed the programme. He was prominent on the turf, owning a good stable of horses.

STENOGRAPHER COMPETITION

The tenth annual convention of the Eastern Commercial Teachers' Association closes its three days' session at Simmons College this afternoon with two contests scheduled, of interest to all in the stenographic world. They are the shorthand competitions for the Miner medal and the typewriting contest for the Trophy and School championship medal.

The election of officers is also held to-day.

BARS WAY TO KING, SHE SAYS

NEW YORK, March 30.—Complaining that Charles H. Graves, United States Minister to Sweden, refused to present her at the Court of King Oscar, although that ruler personally invited her, Mrs. Ida von Clausen has preferred charges to the State Department.

She arrived here Saturday and will go in a few days to Washington to present her grievances to President Roosevelt personally. Mrs. von Clausen is the divorced wife of Dr. William Francis Honan, whom she married when but nineteen.

CHARGE $34,000 THEFT IN LYNN

LYNN, March 30.—Charging that William O. Hadley, formerly manager and treasurer of the Hadley Cement Company, and prominent socially in Lynn and Swampscott, had embezzled $2,300 from the concern, E. D. Lane, one of its directors, had him arrested yesterday. It is stated that the expert examination made by an expert accountant show irregularities in the books that total $34,000. Hadley maintains that he is innocent of the charge against him and says that it is a result of a misunderstanding of his system of bookkeeping. He also asserts that his arrest was caused because of a desire of certain directors to get control of a profitable business. He was released on bail, his father, Albert H. Hadley, being accepted as security.

Three months ago George W. Belonga, a Lynn manufacturer, assumed the treasurership of the company, succeeding Hadley, who, however, remained in the capacity of salesman until last Saturday, when he was discharged.

The director who caused Hadley's arrest asserts that Hadley has diverted to his personal use funds and materials belonging to the company. Among other things it is alleged that recently Hadley purchased a house in a fashionable section of Swampscott from a Lynn shoe manufacturer, who had a mortgage on the property. Instead of paying cash for the house, they say, Hadley paid the manufacturer in cement, and made no entry of the transaction on the company's books.

Hadley is about thirty-eight years of age. He has a wife and one child.

WIFE APPEALS TO AMERICAN TO FIND HUSBAND

Seven Years Wedded, Never Missed Day's Work Until Feb. 4, When He Disappeared.

'WE NEVER HAD QUARREL'

Buoyed up with the hope that her husband will return to their home, Mrs. Charles Zintzsch of No. 375 Savin Hill avenue keeps the light constantly burning, his favorite meal ready, and watches at the window with an eager eye.

Charles Zintzsch, her husband, a woodcarver, who has never missed a day's work before since their marriage, seven years ago, left home for work on the morning of February 4. He has not been heard from since, and to-day his devoted, hopeful wife asks the BOSTON AMERICAN to help find him.

"He was a good husband, fond of home and happy," says Mrs. Zintzsch. "There can be no reason for his absence. We never had a quarrel, and when he kissed me good-bye that morning he was in the best of moods. I fear that some fatality has happened to him.

"Charlie is thirty-five years old, five feet ten inches in height, and weighs about 190 pounds. He has dark brown hair and moustache."

BOY FALLS FROM BOAT AND DROWNS

LOWELL, March 30.—Carl Julian Ozlns, five years of age, fell from a boat in the Merrimac River near Aiken-street bridge and was dead when companions took him from the icy waters. His parents live at No. 846 Lake View avenue.

SEND OVERTIME BILL ON WAY TO ENACTMENT

Passed to Be Engrossed and Is Now Almost in Governor's Hands.

FINAL QUESTION MONDAY

The Overtime bill, prohibiting the employment of women and children in textile establishments after 6 o'clock in the evening and before 6 o'clock in the morning, will be in the House of Representatives and in the Senate again next Monday on the final question of enactment. It has now been passed to be engrossed and is almost in the Governor's hands.

In the Senate yesterday the question was "shall the bill be given a third reading?" Senators Cassidy and Bullock had all the intervening rules suspended in order that the measure might speed upon its way.

Senator Allan G. Buttrick of Worcester died game. His was the only voice raised against the measure. Buttrick, who is an attorney at law, 31 years old, last year led the manoeuvres which stabbed the bill even after it had been passed to be engrossed.

"I believe this bill to be a most pernicious measure," he said yesterday. "I believe that it will cause great hardship to the women and children of Massachusetts. I predict that the time is coming when the people of Massachusetts will gladly wipe it from our statute books."

"Richard Brinsley Sheridan, Mr. President," said Senator Thomas F. Cassidy of Adams, "said that when God gave to man the form of man he also gave to him the feelings of a man, regardless of race or creed or color.

"The great truth, sir, had sunk deeply into the mind and heart of Abraham Lincoln. It furnished for him inspiration for that great speech at Gettsburg.

"Lincoln lived to see the day when chattel slavery was wiped from every corner of the United States. Are we, Mr. President, worthy of Lincoln's martyred death when we permit the curse of industrial slavery to deny the opportunity for education and for mental and moral growth on the part of the boyhood and the girlhood of the poor in the mill slavery of this country?

"I congratulate, through you, Mr. Chairman, the members of this honorable body on the fact that they have come to a realizing sense of their duty, and also to congratulate them on the passage of a measure which means so much to the toilers of this Commonwealth."

The rules were suspended and the bill passed to be engrossed.

EDNA AUG TO QUIT STAGE TO WED BARON

Popular Vaudeville Headliner Crowns Paris Hit by Capture of Nobleman's Heart.

HIS FAMILY GIVE WELCOME

News that pretty Edna Aug, the famous Cincinnati actress, who a few years ago became a recognized headliner in vaudeville, has just become engaged to the Baron Hans von Harzburg, of Dresden, the only son and heir to the title and to a fortune which already nets him an annual income of $40,000, is being received with pleasure by the friends and admirers of the clever young woman in Boston and, for that matter, all over this country.

Miss Aug's father, Jacob Aug, lives on Garfield place, Cincinnati. She has two sisters, also residents of the Ohio city, Mrs. Clara Aug-Wright and Miss Amy Aug, who say they have not received any direct word from her concerning the engagement. Although they admit that when they last heard from her she said the Baron was paying her attentions.

According to the cablegram just received in this country, Baron von Harzburg was returning home from London when he met Miss Aug in Paris, where the Cincinnati girl is making a hit in musical comedy. They became very good friends and with the German Baron it is said to have been almost a case of love at first sight.

He proposed and was accepted, as the pretty American actress had also lost her heart. When the engagement was announced by the Baron to his family, his haughty German mother and sister are said to have offered some objections to the match, both because Miss Aug was an American and because she was an actress. But the young man pleaded his case so well that his family relented and all obstacles to their marriage were swept away.

After the marriage, which, it is said, is not to be long delayed, the German Baron is to take his pretty Cincinnati bride to his ancestral castle in one of the most picturesque parts of the German Alps.

Miss Aug is very pretty, is accomplished and speaks German and French fluently. Her parents are both Germans by birth.

Miss Aug has been on the stage for at least a decade. At first she played minor roles, studying hard all of the time to improve herself. She finally went into vaudeville, and her attractive personality and her cleverness soon gained for her an enviable reputation.

ACTRESS WILL BECOME BARONESS

Edna Aug, pretty American vaudeville entertainer, announced engaged to German nobleman.

Arrangements are nearly completed for the meeting of the Zionist council of Boston to be held on Sunday evening at Faneuil hall, for the purpose of protesting against the Roumanian atrocities and also to appeal to the American government to use its good office to beter the present conditions in Roumania. Among the speakers will be Rabbi M. M. Eichler of the Temple Ohabi Sholum, Superintendent Jacob de Haas of the Young Men's Hebrew Association; Chief Rabbi Wolf Margolies of Baldwin place Synagogue; Senator E. J. Bromberg; Horace M. Kallen and Joseph Barondess of New York.

5-CENT FERRY PLAN BEATEN

Special to the Boston American.

PORTLAND, Me., March 30.—The effort to establish a five-cent ferry line between Portland and Peak's Island was given a knockout blow when the harbor commissioners decided last night not to allow the new company to build a slip at the island.

Public feeling is strongly aroused over the fact that one of the three harbor commissioners who influenced this decision is C. W. T. Goding, manager of the Casco Bay Steamboat Company, the line which has a monopoly on the island business and charges a twenty-five-cent fare.

CURE WAYWARD GIRLS BY USE OF HYPNOTISM

Dr. Quackenbos Reforms Refractory Inmates of Home for Bad Children.

CURES ARE PERMANENT

NEW YORK, March 30.—Plans to cure wayward girls by hypnotism, adopted by the State of New Jersey, have been successfully executed by Dr. John D. Quackenbos of this city. Six girls, inmates of the New Jersey Home for Girls at Trenton, have been under treatment by Dr. Quackenbos for proneness to ungovernable fits of temper, profanity, insane jealousy and acts of violence. Two of the six were successfully hypnotized last Summer. They and four others have been brought to this city for further treatment.

One of the two first treated had been the most refractory of the 300 inmates. Dr. Quackenbos, while she was asleep under his direction, told her that she must control herself; that she must not indulge in fits of temper, and that she must work off her attacks in other directions. The girl responded to the suggestion, and for two months was a model inmate.

"Not Christian Science."

"My system is not akin to Christian Science," said Dr. Quackenbos somewhat forcibly. "To begin with, Christian Science is a religion, with which hypnotic suggestion differs from Christian Science in that hypnosis is exact, scientific, takes into consideration the peculiarities of particular cases and recognizes limitations. We can't cure a hole in the lungs or a heart lesion by hypnotic suggestion. Christian Science, on the other hand, makes claim to do anything.

"To tell in a sentence what I do claim for hypnotism in medicine I should say: By suggestion in hypnosis one can make a man do anything physically possible and morally right."

"The sleep is induced entirely by talking to the subject in a monotone. This droning conversation serves the double purpose of bringing on the hypnotic state and at the same time of making the patient see that the doctor is not there to scold or cross-examine. Take Mary B., for instance.

"'Mary,' I said, 'you came here to be helped and I want to help you all I can. Tell me all about yourself—why you give way to these fits of anger. You see, Mary, I never saw you before and all I know about you is that you want me to help you. If you will tell me about yourself I'm sure I can.'

"Bit by bit the little girl would begin her confidences, and when she had told me all she could I began to tell her what she should do, always speaking in the same steady monotone. After a while Mary's eyes had stopped shifting from the rug to the pictures and back again, and now she was looking at me with a fixed gaze. And I talked on and on and gradually her eyes drooped and closed and she was asleep.

"Results Are Permanent."

"And now I talked on to her just the same except that the sentences were more sharply inflected. 'You're not going to fly into these fits again, Mary,' I would say in a decided tone. 'You are never again going to be jealous of the other girls and fly into a wild anger. You like to play the piano, Mary, I know that, and when you leave the home you will have practiced so much and so faithfully that you will play beautifully.'

"Again and again I went through this with each girl in turn, varying it only in one case to dressmaking instead of piano playing, in another case to the violin, or cooking, or what not, as the subject's mind ran. And at the time appointed Mary or whatever girl it was would wake up or be awakened and depart refreshed and happy.

"How long does it last? In the case of the two girls I treated last June the outbursts of anger disappeared after that one treatment.

PEOPLE JUST TO RAILROADS, SAYS BRYAN

In Letter to Whitney Declares "Honest" Investors Have Nothing to Fear.

IS FOR NATIONAL CONTROL

"Honest investors in honestly conducted railroads have nothing to fear," says William Jennings Bryan, in replying to a letter addressed to him by Henry M. Whitney, asking whether in his judgment there is any danger that railroad regulation by the government will be carried to the point of preventing a reasonable return on money invested in the railroads of the country, and whether in case of the adoption of Government ownership by the Nation or by the several States the stockholders could expect to receive a price equal to the value of the physical railroad properties.

"The sooner the honestly conducted railroads separate themselves from the dishonestly conducted ones the safer they will be; and the sooner the honest investor separates himself from the speculator, the safer he will be," writes Mr. Bryan, whose letter to Mr. Whitney follows, in part:

"I am in favor of both National and State regulations, and I also believe that public ownership is the ultimate solution of the railroad question.

"As an advocate of regulation of the strictest sort, I can say to you that there is no danger whatever that this regulation will be carried to the point of preventing a reasonable return on money invested in the railroads of the country.

Watered Stock the Trouble.

"And I can also assure you that whenever public ownership is adopted by the States or by the Nation, the stockholders may expect to receive a price at least equal to the value of the physical properties of the road.

"It is not necessary for the railroads to bribe legislators either with passes or with other favors to protect themselves against legislation, if the railroads are satisfied with a reasonable return.

"The trouble is that the railroads have watered the stock and have compelled the public to pay dividends and interest upon fictitious capitalization.

"When, however, we come to consider the question of investment, there may be a difference of opinion as to what is just. I have contended that the present value of the railroads should be ascertained by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the commissions of the various States, in order that investors may know when they are buying stock of intrinsic value and when they are being cheated.

"As long as promoters are permitted to issue stock that does not represent real value, there must be fluctuation in the stock market. * * * But the railroads have thus far prevented the passage of a law authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix a value of the roads.

No Confiscation.

"In case the various States or the Nation decide to enter upon public ownership of the roads, there would be no disposition to confiscate the property. * * * They (the investors) are not only protected by the sense of justice in the people themselves, but they are still further protected by the courts, which will not permit legislation that is confiscatory.

"In order to obtain a railroad now in existence, the Government would either have to buy it or condemn it. If it bought, it would have to buy upon the price agreed upon. If it condemned it, it would have to pay the price fixed by the court. It will be seen, therefore, that all this cry about confiscation is without foundation."

BRAVE WOMAN THREW ROBBER DOWNSTAIRS

WILKESBARRE, March 30.—When Mrs. Patrick Givens of Hazleton awakened and found a burglar in her room, she did not wait to arouse her husband, but sprang from bed, seized the man and threw him head first downstairs. He managed to get out of the house and two other men outside helped him away.

LABOR NEWS 96

The new wage scale of Brass Workers' Union No. 55 was presented to five shops, employing seventy men, yesterday, to go into effect Monday. Reports at last night's meeting were that all firms would sign the s[illegible] which calls for a minimum daily w[illegible] of $3 instead of $2.75 as at present.

There is also an apprentice clause which provides for the following pay: For the first six months, $1.25 a day; second six months, $1.50; third, $1.75; fourth, $2; fifth, $2.25; sixth, $2.50. At the end of the fourth year the apprentice shall receive journeyman's pay. There shall be but one apprentice for every ten journeymen.

The union was addressed by International President A. B. Grout of Kenosha, Wis., and New England Organizer John P. White of Boston. The annual ball will be held April 18 at Paine Memorial Hall.

C. L. U. SECTION MOVES.

Next Monday the Building Trades Section of the Central Labor Union will establish headquarters and offices for the business agents of affiliated unions in Hollis Hall, corner of Washington and Hollis streets. Some of the affiliated unions, notably the carpenters and electrical workers, will retain their present offices for the present. Many affiliated unions will also meet in the large hall. The board of governors of the section will meet there every morning informally and every Monday officially at 10 o'clock.

Bartenders' Union, which has occupied the place as its offices, day headquarters and meeting place, has moved to the Winthrop Building, corner of Water and Washington streets.

ELECTROTYPERS' BALL.

Electrotypers' Union No. 74 has sent invitations to International President James J. Freil, International Secretary-Treasurer W. W. Williams and officers of all affiliated trades to attend its fourth annual ball April 19 in Berkeley Hall. The officers will be: Floor director, P. J. Carey; first assistant, Joseph A. Davis; second assistant, Louis G. Schell; chief of aids, George Davidson.

ADDRESSES ENGINEERS.

Andrew J. Tighe, president of Coal Hoisting Engineers' Union No. 76, spoke on "Unionism" before Stationary Engineers' Union No. 16 last night. Arrangements were made for a mass meeting next Monday night at Red Men's Hall to tender a farewell reception to Former President Frank B. Monaghan, who leaves that night for New York to assume the editorship of the International Journal.

LABOR NOTES.

The grievance committee of the Building Trades Council delegated Business Agent John T. Cashman and John J. Brophey last night to visit the proprietors of two large hotels in this city in regard to work being done on the buildings.

Boilermakers' Union No. 250 elected the following officers for its annual ball, April 18 in Orienta Hall, Roxbury: Floor marshal, John A. Quinn; floor director, David M. Yule; assistant floor director, Joseph F. Neas. The union will meet hereafter at No. 724 Washington st.

New England Organizer Michael F. Garrett of Worcester will address a special meeting of Steamfitters' Union No. 22 next Monday night at No. 18 Kneeland street. On Tuesday night he speaks before Steamfitters' Helpers' Union at the same place.

Building Trades Council quarterly cards will be ready for distribution next Friday night at No. 18 Kneeland street.

Beatrice Fairfax Says Women Need Diversion as Much as Men Do, and Gives Advice on

HOW TO KEEP YOUR WIFE CONTENTED

Don't Tie Her Up at Home All the Time

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GOOD many husbands labor under the idea that if they give their wives a good home and are generous in money matters they are doing all that should be expected of them.

"Woman's place," a man argues, "is at home. She should be quite happy attending to her house and children; they should fill her life. As for me—I am a man of affairs—it is necessary that I see life from all sides."

He expects his wife to be perfectly content in the narrow confines of the home circle. If she grows dull and unattractive he finds recreation in the society of some other woman.

Too much of any one thing is bad for everybody, and too much home and babies is bad for even the most domestic of women.

It is very easy for a woman to get it into her head that the house and children cannot possibly get on without her even for a day.

The Difference

HER husband, who should be the one to get her out of her rut, is too much absorbed by business, politics or outside pleasures to notice what a dull routine her life is.

He is vaguely aware that she is not as attractive as she used to be, but as long as his meals are good and he is comfortable he does not much care.

He loves her, of course, but in a very prosaic, take-it-for-granted sort of way. He would miss his comforts more than her companionship if she went out of his life.

Sometimes he wishes discontentedly that she would be as gay and vivacious as young Mrs. So and So, whom he met the other day. He does not realize that she is swamped with household cares and a growing family.

It is absolutely necessary that the mother of a family should have relaxation. The father has his business, with its varied interests and excitements. He probably belongs to a club of some kind; he has plenty to keep his mind alert and interested.

But the mother sometimes for days does not get away from the house and children. Her husband comes home, reads his paper and goes to bed. Her life goes on day in and day out in the same old grind.

What She Likes

HOW tired she gets of eating and in many cases cooking the dinners she orders day after day. How she would enjoy going out to dinner once a week, dressed in her prettiest clothes and dining with a husband who paid her the little attentions he used to in the courting days!

The relief of getting away from the house and even the beloved babies for a while would be great.

A woman likes her husband to talk his business matters over with her. She likes to give advice, which, of course, he never takes, but that does not trouble her in the least so long as he listens gravely to her suggestions.

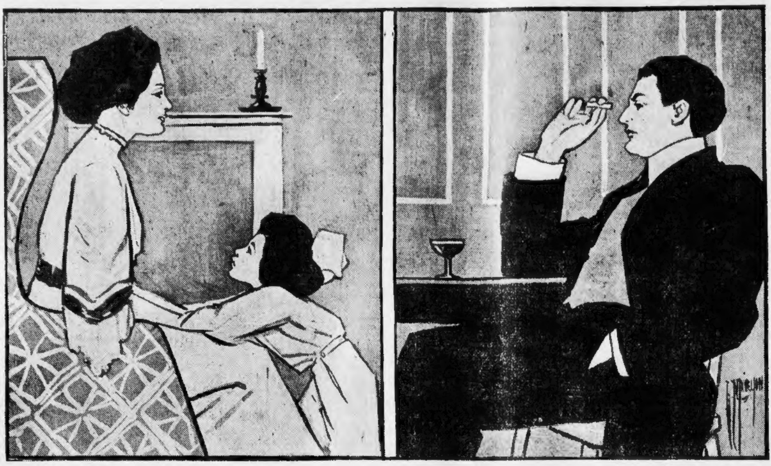
If husbands could only appreciate how much brighter and happier their wives are for an occasional outing they would take them oftener.

No man would endure the monotony of a woman's life for a week. And yet they will condemn a woman to it year in and year out, and are astonished if she finds it dull.

Their pet accusation is that she is "unwomanly" if she makes any effort outside the home.

Well, Mr. Husband, the way to keep her happy and satisfied is to remember that she, as well as you, would like to see a little of the world. Take her out and give her a good time once in a while.

MANY HUSBANDS MAKE THIS SAD MISTAKE



"Woman's place," a man argues, "is at home"

"As for me," he says, "I must see life"

SACRIFICING CHILDREN TO AMBITION

Study Your Child's Abilities Before You Reach the Conclusion He Is Bound to Be a Genius

PERHAPS an amiable, but assuredly a dangerous, assumption is that on the part of parents, and more especially on the part of mothers, that their children have it in them to be geniuses.

Little Johnny is seized with a mania for appropriating opened envelopes or other available resources of paper, and with a stump of pencil travelling perpetually to his lips in order to produce fine shadow effects, is forever drawing cats with triangular faces, eyes that are anything but round, noses well out of the perpendicular, and crooked horizontal lines for mouths.

Or he makes an irregular oblong, from each lower corner of which he lets falls a straight line, to each upper corner he affixes another stroke, and with a circle for head, a few dashes for features, dots for eyes, and a triangle for a cocked hat he proclaims that he has drawn a soldier.

"The child will be an artist," cry his gratified parents—"perhaps a great artist."

He loves to perform upon a cheap cornet or a whistle. Then he will be a great musician.

He writes rhymes conspicuous for everything but metre and rhyming. Then he will be a poet.

Ambitious Parents

And on some scant and uncertain indications—in a few cases, of course, more serious and justified—it may be his future is wrecked. His good, all-around development—that which would serve to make a useful, capable man of him—is lost sight of.

In a world of average men and women, ambitious parents—more especially mothers—are not satisfied that their boys and girls shall be average. They are pressed, forced, scolded and persuaded.

Ignorant of that first law of development which demands rest and leisure for the proper growth of any faculty, somebody is forever at their elbows insisting that time is valuable, that life is short, that they shall remember their talent and waste neither.

If they would make a stir in the world, they must be up and doing.

One has memories of weary-eyed, spiritless or restless, fever-bright children, in whom mothers saw neither the anaemia, nor nervelessness, nor sleeplessness, nor indigestion consequent on long, close hours, and over-taxed brains—nothing of these—only that possible realization of ambitions.

Intentions Are Good

That mothers, in this relation, are inspired by excellent intentions is not denied.

In some cases, it is true, such maternal ambition is the outcome of mere selfish vanity.

The mother herself, it may be, has never made one effort toward distinction, and does not know the cost, but her son or daughter shall, if training, forcing and perpetual spurring will avail, be made to excel, in order that she may share their glory.

Such mothers must be left out of account—it is to be hoped they are rare; at all events, nothing that can be addressed to them from the standpoint of their children's welfare will be of the slightest use.

One speaks, therefore, to her who, with the best intentions in the world, strives to make geniuses of her average brood.

A quite ungifted woman—the wife of a mediocre, unsuccessful man—observed with an indignation amounting almost to anger to the beautiful, talented wife of a distinguished, well-known lawyer:

"I can't think how it is that my children are not so clever and handsome as yours."

And she continued to bewail and admonish her children. "Why do you not head your class as Clarence N—— does?"

"Why do you not play the piano and sing, and carry yourself, and have pretty manners like Julia N——?"

And eventually: "Why do you not marry so successfully and get on in the world so well as Julia and Clarence N——?"

The explanation was manifest to all.

Julia and Clarence N—— were exceptionally gifted in both looks and talents.

The others, to whom the N——s were perpetually held up as examples, were average, healthy, hearty children, who, under a just and prudent upbringing, would have made average useful members of society.

As it was, perpetually goaded to exhibit and develop qualities they lacked, they proved failures.

Two Lives Wrecked

The boy who, possessing good, all-round capacities, might have made an excellent, contented man of business, was perverted by his mother's teaching into becoming a neurotic and morose twelfth-rate poet, whom nobody reads; while the daughter, who might have been a happy wife and mother, a capable teacher or a helpful hospital nurse, wasted six or eight hours daily for seven long years vainly laboring to wrest music from a violin.

These two young lives have been absolutely sacrificed to a maternal ambition, wicked in its selfish disregard of their shortcomings, their actual abilities and their personal well-being.

FOR the first time the young lawyer began to understand the real import of the feeling inspired by the first sight of the beautiful face and the cause of the interest that had kept it ever before him, with the vague and continued wonderment and desire to know where she was, what had been the secret behind the romantic but tragic linking of herself and the man he hated, and when and where their next meeting would be.

For he had never despaired of meeting her again and at a happier time. Of what might follow he had given little thought. Now that he understood her words "irrevocably bound to that man" it had come to him.

"Your husband!" he repeated mechanically.

"Yes my wretched husband. He has been a curse, a nightmare, a terror to me, almost from the hour of our marriage. For nearly a year I have been free from his persecutions, but I never know when he may reappear again upon the scene and what then may happen. I have no sense of security whatever."

Vera in Terror

All Frank's scruples against revealing to this beautiful woman her husband's perfidy vanished with her words. While the train sped on he related to her the story of Mueller's masquerade as Schmidt in New York, of his desperate attempt to throw his own crime on to Reginald, and then of his strange sojourn in Moorcombe, where, seemingly forgetting the full purpose of his life, he wooed and married Sylvia Thurston.

"Married her! Good heavens!" cried Vera. "The poor, deluded girl!"

Then Frank continued, telling her of the tragedy which followed the marriage, when Sylvia learned the man she called husband was the murderer of her brother.

At the climax of Frank's tale, when he told the woman of Mueller's theft of the airship and his escape in it with Nurse Mason, the woman turned ghastly pale.

"That means I am in danger at this moment!" she exclaimed. "I have always said that only one thing save death would ever distract Carl from his evil purposes, and that was his falling in love with some woman. He never loved me. He must have loved this Sylvia Thurston if his love kept him from continuing his fiendish pursuit and persecution of me to attain one thing."

"And that?" said Frank.

"That," she answered sadly, "you know."

"Now," she continued, "that he has been robbed of that love, he will return to consummate the plan which has been the leading thought of his existence for years. I may expect to hear that he is on my track at any moment."

The train had pulled into Buffalo as she finished. As if her words were prophetic, a messenger boy was shouting on the platform:

"A telegram for the Baroness Slavinsky."

She started to her feet

"What is that?" she exclaimed.

Frank repeated the words.

"Call the man; it is for me. What can it mean?"

Frank saw that she was trembling with excitement, and at once hailed the boy, who at that moment went shouting by.

The Baroness was close behind Frank as he took the telegram from the hand of the messenger. She clutched the envelope eagerly and broke it open. Frank saw her eyes dilate with horror as she read. Not a vestige of color was left in her face.

"It is just as I feared," she said, turning to Frank. "It is impossible for me to go on to-night. I must return by the next train."

"Does this message tell you where your husband is?" Frank asked, throbbing with excitement. "If it does, let me know where I can find him. The authorities want him, and I can place him where he will never trouble you again."

"I Dare Not"

"I dare not," returned the Baroness, trembling. "This message, while it tells me that my husband is hunting me, does not give any clue to his whereabouts. It comes to me through a channel of which I dare not speak. Believe me, I would tell you everything if I could. But I must not explain to you now. Too many others are concerned. I must return by the next train. What am I to do? My trunk is checked to Cleveland, and there is a valuable box in the top tray that I must have."

"Can I be of any assistance?" Frank asked.

"Oh, if you would kindly oblige me," she said, opening her purse. "Here are the checks and the key. If you will be good enough when you get to Cleveland to open it and take out a little lacquered box that you will find in the top tray, mail the box to me and put the trunk in storage, I shall be infinitely obliged to you."

"I shall be delighted, and I wish the trouble, as you term it, were infinitely greater."

He then saw her to the waiting room. There her manner entirely changed. She made no further reference to the telegram, and he reflected that something of dire import must have happened. In parting, however, her old mood returned.

"You have been more than good to me," she said fervently; "more than good. Some day, perhaps, you may learn all, and in the meantime I will not forget."

Then the whistle sounded and they exchanged a final handshake as Bracebridge stepped aboard the train.

When Cleveland was reached Frank's first act was to walk to the baggage room.

"All right, sir," declared a baggageman, as he pointed to a huge trunk upon which Frank noticed a label of a New York hotel, "there you are, sir."

Frank turned the key as the trunk was brought forward on a baggage truck. The baggage inspector, who was obsequiously assisting, staggered back as he threw the lid up.

"My God!" he gasped.

Frank, whose attention had been diverted by the rapid approach of a uniformed policeman, now but a few steps off, turned to the baggageman.

Frank looked, and what he saw turned him faint with horror.

There huddled up in evening clothes was the corpse of his cousin Reginald, the glazed eyes looking up as if in a dying endeavor to meet his.

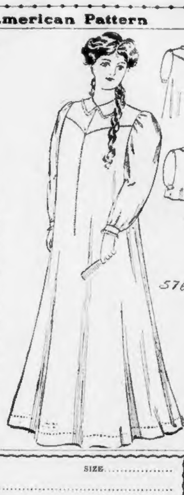
The Boston American Pattern

A PLAIN NIGHT GOWN



No. 5,766—Simple construction characterizes this design for a plain sack night gown. It is especially suited to outing flannel or any of the heavier materials. The shaping is effected by shoulder and under-arm seams, and a pointed yoke may be applied, thereby adding to the durability of the garment. The pattern also provides for short length, which will be found very convenient in case of illness. The full sleeves are gathered into narrow bands and a roll-over collar finishes the neck. Muslin, nainsook, cambric and flannel are all suitable for development. For 36 inches bust measure 5¾ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

No. 5,766—In long or short lengths, and with or without a yoke. Sizes for 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inch bust.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents and the size, name and address to the BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass., allowing one week for delivery.

The Boston American Spring and Summer Catalogue for 1907 Is Now Ready

THIS catalogue contains between 400 and 500 of the very latest designs for ladies', misses' and children's garments, also illustrated lessons on the making of fine lingerie and baby clothes, including the various embroidery stitches now in use and the fancy stitches employed in the finishing of hand-made garments. To obtain this book send 10 cents in money or stamps to the BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston.

How to Prevent the Hair from Falling

THERE are thousands of men and women in this country who are deliberately destroying their hair.

Some are daily making themselves bald, many are engaged in discoloring their hair and turning it gray, others every morning of their lives carefully treat their heads with preparations that in the long run will most probably induce scurf and cause painful irritation.

Of course they do not want to destroy the hair. That is the pity of it. They want to preserve it, as they know what a handicap gray hair, or no hair at all, is in this world of the young, where "too old at forty" is the general rule.

Now there are two main ways by which hair can be destroyed. The first is neglect, the second—and most deadly—is wrongful treatment.

There are many ways in which different people neglect their hair. Insufficient washing or washing too frequently; brushing and combing the hair either too little or too much, or in a wrong manner; disregarding the excess or deficiency of the natural grease of the hair; ignoring the presence of scurf or irritation, are just one or two of the everyday forms of neglect.

Don't forget to have the hair thoroughly cut and singed every three months; it is not sufficient to have the long hair clipped. But special attention should be paid to the weak new hairs that spring up all along the central parting.

Don't forget to brush the hair for ten minutes every night with a whalebone bristle brush. This may make the head a little tender at first, but the tenderness soon wears off.

CREAMED HAM AND POACHED EGGS.

MAKE a smooth white sauce with two rounding tablespoons of butter and one of cornstarch, with a pint of milk. Season with pepper only, and add a cup of finely chopped cooked ham; spread the mixture over rounds of toast, lay a carefully poached egg over each, season lightly and serve immediately in a hot dish, garnished with curly parsley.

MRS. MARY CLOSSEY.
No. 82 Richardson st., Newton.

BOILED CIDER PIE

ONE egg, one cupful sugar, a small piece butter, seven tablespoons boiled cider; bake with two crusts.

FRIED TOMATOES

Slice ripe tomatoes and dip them in well-beaten eggs, which have been seasoned with salt, pepper and sugar (one teaspoonful of sugar to each egg), and then in fine bread or cracker crumbs. Have two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan; when hot put in as many slices of tomatoes as will cover the bottom; fry for ten minutes; serve on slices of toast.

MRS. MAUDE S. FULLINGTON.
West Boylston street, Worcester.

ORANGE SOUP

ONE pint orange juice, one pint water, bring to the boiling point, add one teaspoonful of arrow root wet with a little cold water. Cook one minute, strain and add four tablespoons sugar; put away to cool. Serve with one tablespoon cracked ice in a lemonade glass. Currant, raspberry and blackberry soups are made the same way.

PINEAPPLE CREAM

Soak two tablespoons gelatine in one-half cup cold water for ten minutes, add one cup boiling water, stir until dissolved. Stir in one can grated pineapple, one cup sugar. Set on ice and when nearly cold add one pint whipped cream.

MRS. IRVING WOODARD, Jr.
No. 66 Eustis street, Roxbury.

POTATO SALAD

TAKE six boiled potatoes and one small onion chopped fine, slice potatoes thin and lay in salad dish and sprinkle with onions. Continue until dish is full, adding dressing on each layer. Slice two hard-boiled eggs and lay on top, then add more dressing.

SALAD DRESSING.

Two eggs, one teaspoon mustard, four tablespoons of butter (soft), two teaspoons of sugar, eight tablespoons of vinegar. Beat all together and cook twenty minutes. Beat while cooking, when done set away to cool. When wanted, add two-thirds cup of milk and a teaspoon of salt. This dressing will keep a long time if kept in glass jars before adding milk.

Expert Tells How Care of the Teeth Affects the Health

THE following is one of a series of articles prepared for the BOSTON AMERICAN by a dentist who stands at the very top of his profession in the United States. In this series of short, condensed articles he will give to the public information that will be of permanent value to them and to their children, if they will be guided by it.

"THERE is a time for everything" is an old and wise saying, and more heed should be paid to it now than ever before.

Too often we hear a man say, "I haven't time to eat and very little to sleep. Too busy. But some day I will change all this and enjoy life."

That day never comes for this man. Long before he has reached his goal his health will be gone, and all his promised enjoyment of life and all the duties owed to his fellow-man will be swallowed up in medicine bottles. Life, so sweet and dear to the well and strong, becomes a burden to the broken, and neither money, power or social position can pay the interest on the capital invested.

Are you chasing this phantom? Are you deluding yourself with the thought that you can destroy the sound constitution entrusted to you by your Maker, and that the doctor will give you a new one?

Medicine, like all the sciences, has made wonderful strides, but she cannot, now or in the future, replace a broken organ with a good one. Man has not the power of resurrection, and that is what would be needed.

Use Common Sense

WHATEVER aim in life you may have, make common sense its foundation. Weigh the cost and gain in the scales, and, while it may happen that following this rule you will move along more slowly, you will nevertheless be the gainer in the end.

Common sense tells you first of all not to pay out more strength than you are taking in. Not to put undue strain on any organ, be it brain, heart, stomach, lungs or liver.

Give each part its full share of work and full share of rest, and many aches and pains will be of the past.

To be well simply means not to be conscious of any part of your body.

As soon as you realize that you have a stomach or liver or lungs you may be sure something is wrong with them. Each part of our body is meant for use, not abuse.

At Lunch Counters!

TO illustrate this, let me take you to one of our modern lunch counters at the time when men and women rush in from busy offices to take their midday meal. A glass of ice water, a sandwich, a piece of pie and another glass of ice water.

The first to moisten the way, that the second and third can slide down easily, and the fourth to hasten along any straggling chunk.

Masticate? Why, no! Haven't time.

Here is a tired, heated and empty stomach being loaded in a few seconds with material that will take hours to get rid of, for it cannot digest it.

The temperature of the stomach, to begin with, is more than 100 degrees Fahrenheit, and water at a temperature but slightly higher than the freezing point will chill the membranes to such a degree that the digestive fluids which should and would be poured out in abundance are simply checked, and the chunks of bread, meat and pastry float around in the icy bath for hours, and give distress, but no nourishment.

This often repeated—and it is, from week to week—will bring about a hardened condition of the mucous membrane of the stomach and chronic dyspepsia is the result. This is abuse of the stomach and not use of it.

To Make Eggs and Rabbits for Easter

THE association of eggs with some kind of Spring festival seems to be an ineradicable instinct in the human breast. The custom far antedates the Christian era, and to-day its popularity shows no signs of abatement.

The only difference is that the modern Easter egg is a wonderful creation, such as our forefathers never dreamed of.

It is made of confectionery, glass, papier mache and various other materials, while for the children the toy shops display eggs which contain a fairyland of surprises.

The Easter rabbit, too, or hare, as it ought to be, has undergone evolution.

As seen in the toy and candy shops it is a gay little creature driving an auto, or inhabiting a gilded doll house, instead of living in its natural haunts among trees and flowers and grasses.

Ridiculous little hares or rabbits may be made from ordinary eggs.

Very large eggs should be chosen for the purpose, and after they have been boiled hard they can easily be transformed into rabbits by pasting on little feet at the large end and ears of cotton at the small one, and drawing the eyes, nose and mouth with melted chocolate.

The result will not be highly aesthetic, but it will amuse the little folk, and that is all that is necessary, and afterward the little animals, unlike the more realistic ones sold in the shops, can be eaten as a salad.

After disrobing them, place two on a lettuce leaf for each person, and serve with green or pink mayonnaise.

The baking and distributing of cakes and buns at Eastertime have been popular in days gone by, and the custom is still adhered to in various parts of the world.

Tcheureks are Greek Easter cakes, made in the form of a large fleur-de-lis or a three pointed flower to represent the Trinity. They are sold on the streets during Holy Week.

To make them, mix four and a half ounces of butter with four and a half ounces of sugar. Add five beaten eggs, a cup of milk and two ounces of liquid yeast. Sift in ten ounces of flour. Let the mixture rise for two hours, then form in the shape of a three-cornered flower and ice it, baking two hours.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

DON'T WASTE TIME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Some time ago I became attached to a young man who is in an office. He secured my mother's consent and mine to call on me and take me out. I have left the position I had in the same building with him and do not have a chance to see him since then. He has stopped calling on me and does not even write to me. I have lots of other young men friends, but I think more of this young man than all the others. How can I find out the reason he does not call? He lives some distance, but that does not keep him away, for he told me that if he liked a girl no distance could keep him away from her.

M. F.

IF I were you I would not bother about him. He seems rather a fickle young man. Try and become interested in some of your other friends, and don't waste your time fretting over this uncertain young man.

A POINT OF ETIQUETTE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of nineteen and would like your advice in the following: A young man is calling on me. When he enters the room I generally step forward to meet him and offer him my hand. Upon leaving he does not offer his hand. Would you kindly tell me the proper way? Is it the young man's place to offer to shake hands on leaving, or is that a point of etiquette that some people nowadays dispense with?

HE should shake hands with you when saying good night. However, it is not a very serious matter, and if I were you I would not let it make any trouble between your friend and yourself.

Itching Scalp, Dandruff and Falling Hair

These symptoms indicate a diseased condition of the scalp, and always result in baldness if the condition is not corrected.

The hair can always be saved if proper treatment is administered in time, but after the hair roots are dead renewed growth is impossible. Don't delay until the hair is all gone, for nothing will grow hair on a shiny bald head.

At the Woodbury Institute treatment is given under direct instructions of a specialist of long experience. Many thousands of cases are treated every year, and success is assured in every case.

READERS OF "FRIDAY, THE 13TH."

This story will be finished in morrow's BOSTON AMERICAN. Don't fail to read the dramatic ending.

DEFIANCE, deference, contempt, and pity all blended in his mien, but over all was an I-am-the-one-you-are-the-many atmosphere of confidence that turned spinal column into a mercury tube.

He began to speak:

"Men of Wall Street:

"You have just witnessed a record-breaking slaughter. I have asked permission to talk to you for the purpose of showing you how any member of a great stock exchange may at any time do what I have done to-day. Weigh well what I am about to say to you.

"During the last quarter of a century there has grown up in this free and fair land of ours a system by which the few take from the many the results of their labors.

"The men who take have no more license, from God or man, to take, than have those from whom they filch. They are not endowed by God with superior wisdom, nor have they performed for their fellow-men any labor or given to them anything of value that entitles them to what they take.

Trickery

"Their only license to plunder is their knowledge of the system of trickery and fraud that they themselves have created. No man can gainsay this, for on every side is the evidence.

"Men come into Wall Street at sunrise without dollars; before that same sun sets they depart with millions. So all-powerful has grown the system of oppression that single men take in a single lifetime all the savings of a million of their fellows.

"To-day the people, eighty millions strong, are slaving for the few, and their pay is their board and keep. I saw this robbery. I felt the robbers' scourge. I sought the secret. I found it here, here in this gambling hell.

"I found that the stocks we bought and sold were mere gambling chips; that the man who had the biggest stack could beat his opponent off the board; that his opponent was the world, because all men directly or indirectly played the stock-gambling game.

"To win, it was but necessary to have unlimited chips. If chips were bought and sold, on equal terms, by all, no one could buy more than he could pay for, and the game, although still a gambling one, would be fair.

"A few master tricksters, dollar magicians, long ago seeing this condition, invented the system by which the people are ruthlessly plundered. The system they invented was simple, so simple that for a quarter of a century it has remained undiscovered by the world at large—and even by you, who profess to be experts.

"No man thought that a free people who had intended to allow all the equal use of every avenue for the attainment of wealth, and who intended to provide for the safeguarding of wealth after it was secured, could be such dolts as to allow themselves to be robbed of all their accumulated wealth by a device as simple that by which children play at blind-man's buff.

"The process was no more complex than that employed by the robber of old, who took the pebbles from the beach, marked them money, and with the money bought the labor of his fellows, and by the manipulation of that labor and by turning pebbles into money he took away from the laborer the money which he had paid them for the labor until all in the land were slaves of the money maker.

"These few tricksters said: We will arbitrarily manufacture these chips—stocks. After we have manufactured them we will sell the world what the world can pay for, and then by the use of the unlimited supply we still have we will win away from the world what it has bought, and repeat the operation until we have all the weath, and the people are enslaved.

"To do this there was one thing besides the manufacturing of the chips—stocks—that was absolutely necessary—a gambling hell, the working of whose machinery would place a selling value upon such chips; a hell where, after selling the chips, they could be won back.

"I saw that if these tricksters were to be routed and their 'System' was to be destroyed, it must be through the machinery of this Stock Exchange.

"I studied the machinery, and presently I marvelled that men could for so long have been asses.

"From the very nature of stock gambling, it is necessary, absolutely necessary, that it be conducted under certain rules, unchangeable, unbreakable rules, to attempt to change or break which would destroy stock-gambling.

Revelation

"The foundation rule, the rule absolutely necessary for the existence of stock-gambling is: Any member of the Stock Exchange can buy, or sell, between the opening and the closing of the Exchange as many shares of stock as he cares to.

"With this rule in force his buying and selling cannot be restricted to the amount he can take and pay for, or deliver and receive pay for, because there is not money enough in the world to pay for what under the same rule can be bought and sold in a single session.

"This is because there have been arbitrarily created by these few tricksters many times more stocks than there is money in existence.

"The amount of stock that any man can sell in one session of the Exchange is limited only by the amount that he can offer for sale, and he can offer any amount his tongue can utter; and he is not compelled and cannot be compelled to show his ability to deliver what he has offered for sale until after he has finished selling, which is the following day.

"You will ask as I did: Can this be possible?

"You will find the answer I found.

"It is so, and must continue to be so, or there will be no stock gambling. Mark me, for this statement is weighted with the greatest import to you all.

"A member of this Exchange can sell as many shares of stock at one session as he cares to offer. If any attempt is made at the session he sells at to compel him either before or after he offers to sell to show his ability to deliver, away goes the stock gambling structure, because from the very nature of the whole structure of stock gambling the same shares are sold and resold many times in each session and the seller cannot know, much less show, that he can deliver until he first adjusts with the buyer and the buyer cannot adjust until after he has become such by buying.

"If a rule were made compelling a seller to show his responsibility before selling, every member would have every other member at his mercy and there could be no stock gambling.

"When I had worked this out I saw that while the few tricksters of the 'System' had a perfect device for taking from the people their wealth, I had discovered as perfect a means of taking away from the few the wealth they had secured from the many.

"With this knowledge came a conviction that my way was as honest as the 'System's,' in fact more honest than theirs.

"They took from the innocent, I took from the guilty what had already been dishonestly secured. I determined to put my discovery into practice.

"I might never have done so but for that Sugar panic in which I was robbed of millions by the 'System' through Barry Conant. In that panic the 'System,' with its unlimited resources, filched from the people by the arbitrary manufacture of stocks, and by their manipulation did to me what I afterward discovered I could do to them, without any resources other than my right to do business on the floor of this exchange.

"You saw the outcome, in the second Sugar panic, of my first experiment. In a few minutes I cleared a profit of ten million dollars. I could have made it fifty millions, or one hundred and fifty, but I was not then on familiar terms with my new robber-robbing device, and I had yet a heart.

"To make this ten millions of money all that was necessary for me to do was to sell more Sugar than Barry Conant could buy.

"This was easy, because Barry Conant, not knowing of my newly-invented trick, could buy only what he could pay for on the morrow, or, at least, what he believed his clients could pay for; while I, not intending to deliver what I sold—unless by smashing the price to a point where I could compel those who had bought to resell to me at millions less than I sold at—could sell unlimited amounts—literally unlimited amounts.

"When Barry Conant had bought all that he thought he could pay for he was obliged to beat a retreat in front of my offerings, and I was able to smash, and smash, until the price was so low that he could not by the use of what he had bought, as collateral, borrow sufficient to pay me for what I had sold him.

"Then he was compelled to turn about and sell what he had bought from me, and when I had rebought it, for ten millions less than I had sold it for, the trick had been turned.

"I had sold him 100,000 shares, say at 220. He had sold them back to me say at 120, and he stood where he had stood at the beginning. He had none of the 100,000 shares.

"Both of us stood, so far as stock was concerned, where we had stood at the beginning, but as to profits and losses there was this difference: I had ten millions of dollars profits, while Barry Conant's clients, the 'System,' were ten millions losers—and all by a trick. The trick did not differ in principle from the one in constant practice by the 'System.'

"When the 'System,' after manufacturing Sugar stock, sell 100,000 shares to the people for $10,000,000, they so manipulate the market by the use of the $10,000,000 that they have taken from the people so as to scare them into selling the 100,000 shares back to them for $5,000,000.

"After they have bought they again manipulate the market until the people buy back for $10,000,000 what they sold for $5,000,000. The 'System' commits no legal crime. I committed no legal crime. I had not even infringed any rule of the Exchange, any more than had the 'System' when they performed their trick.

Made Billion

"Since my experimental panic I have repeatedly put the trick in operation, and each time I have taken millions, until to-day I have in my control, as absolutely as though I had honestly earned them, as the laborer earns his week's wages, or the farmer the price of his crops, over $1,000,000,000, or sufficient to keep enslaved the rest of their lives a million people.

"What do you intelligent men think of this situation?

"You know, because you know the stock-gambling game, that the American people, with their boasted brains and courage, come year after year with their bags of gold, the result of their prosperous labors, and dump them, hundreds of millions, into this gambling inferno of yours.

"You know that they are fools, these silly millions of people whom you term lambs and suckers.

"You chuckle as, year after year, having been sent away shorn, they return for new shearing.

"You marvel that the merchants, manufacturers, miners, lawyers, farmers, who have sufficient intelligence to gather such surplus legitimately, would bring it to our gambling hell, where upon all sides is plain proof that we who conduct the gambling, and who produce nothing, are obliged to take from those who do produce hundreds of millions each year for expenses and hundreds of millions each year for profits—for you know that we have nothing to give them in return for what they bring to us.

"You know that every dollar of the billions lost in Wall Street means higher prices for steel rails, for lumber and cars, and that this means higher passenger and freight rates to the people.

"You know that when the manufacturer brings his wealth to Wall Street and is robbed of it, he will add something to the price of boots and shoes, cotton and woolen clothes, and other necessities that he makes and that he sells to the people.

"You know that when the copper, lead, tin and iron miners part with their surplus to the 'System,' it means higher prices to the people for their copper pots and gutters, for the water that comes through lead pipes, for their tin dippers and wash boilers, and for their rents and all those necessities into which machinery, lumber and other raw and finished material enters.

"You know that every hundred millions dropped by real producers to the brigands of our world means lower wages or less of the necessities and luxuries for all the people, and especially for the farmer.

"You know that it is habit with us of Wall Street to gloat over the doctrine of the 'System,' which the people parrot among themselves, the doctrine that the people at large are not affected by our gambling, because they, the people, having no surplus to gamble with, never come into Wall Street.

Open Sesame

"And yet, knowing all this, you never thought, with all your wisdom and cynicism, that right here in this institution, which you own and control, was the open sesame, for each or all of you, to those great chests of gold that your clients, the 'System,' have filled to bursting from the stores of the people.

"What, I ask, do you wise men think of the situation as you now see it?"

There was an oppressive stillness on the floor. The great crowd, which now contained nearly all the members of the Exchange, listened with bulging eyes and open mouths to the revelations of their fellow member.

21 EXAMINED FOR FERRY JOB

Twenty-one candidates for the position of superintendent of ferries, made vacant by the Supreme Court decision that Mayor Fitzgerald's appointee, John J. Douglass, was holding the position illegally, took the civil service examination at the State House yesterday.

Among them were former Superintendent William J. Donovan, Chief Clerk Joseph Low, Foreman Martin Kane, Night Foreman Harry Christerman, John Brant, Edward Barron and former Councilman Joseph E. Carter of Ward 2, who, it is claimed, was originally promised the position by Mayor Fitzgerald. Mr. Douglass did not take the examination.

Night Foreman Christerman has the advantage of coming under the veterans' preference act.

POOL-MAKERS' TRUST RAIDED

NEW YORK, March 30.—Sensational developments are expected as the result of the raid made yesterday on an alleged poolroom in Fulton street. In formation gathered by the police and District Attorney's office, it is said, reveals practically the entire working of the syndicates which have largely controlled the poolroom business of New York.

The room raided is said to be the headquarters of the Davis-Robinson-Reilly Syndicate, a combination whose wealth runs into the millions. Charles Reilly and Edward Fischer, active managers of the place, were arrested with four other men. In the three safes seized were found checks from many prominent men.

FOUR BOYS KILLED UNDER LIGHT ENGINE

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 30.—Four boys returning from a muskrat hunt near Winchester, a suburb of Buffalo, were run down and killed by a light engine. The bodies of the boys were ground beneath the engine and terribly mutilated.

SEEKS TO WIN BACK PAPA BY BABES' PHOTO

Malden Mother Finds Hope of Happiness in the American's Prize Contest.

ILL, SHE FIGHTS ADVERSITY

In the hope that she might win happiness for her babies, Mrs. George Albert Draper of No. 256 Main street, Malden, sent this picture of her children to the editor of the Prize Baby Contest of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN with the following explanatory letter:

> "I hope my babies' pictures will be published in the BOSTON AMERICAN whether they win a prize or not. They were deserted by their father two years ago. If he sees their pictures, it may change his heart of stone and send him back to them."

Investigation proved the story to be more than true. When Ethel Estell Draper was two years and five months old and Earl a little baby of ten months, just the sweet, happy pair their photographs show them to be, their father went away. He has never returned. For two long years the mother has suffered and worked for her children. It has been a hard struggle. There are not a great many avenues of employment open to a woman with two dependent babies. But Mrs. Draper has managed to keep them with her, and make a place with the semblance of a home for them.

The past year has been unusually hard, for the mother has been out of work, ill and in the hospital, and the babies have had to have outside care. They are bright, intelligent children, but they lack the happiness which only a home and united parents can give to children.

The story illustrates the great possibilities of the great Prize Baby Contest.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN started out to find the most beautiful baby in Greater Boston. Perhaps it is going to bring happiness to some babies who are not beauty prize winners. And, after all, happiness is as great a discovery as beauty, and perhaps the happiest baby in Greater Boston would be even luckier than the most beautiful.

TRUSTS BOOM IN GERMANY

$5,000,000 PLANT FOR EAST BOSTON

Plan to Build Four Great Mills with 240,000 Spindles for Export Cotton Trade.

RAISE CAPITAL IN THE HUB

Planning to develop East Boston into a worthy rival of the great cotton spinning centres of the world, Eugene N. Foss of the Sturtevant Blower Company is promoting an enterprise to build there four model, mammoth cotton mills, with an aggregate of 240,000 spindles, to weave for the export trade, to be built at a cost of $5,000,000, mostly Boston capital.

The idea was developed by Mr. Foss during a European trip last Summer, at which time he came to the conclusion that the United States, which furnishes all of the raw material for European mills, might take a larger share in the production of the finished material.

He hit upon East Boston as an ideal site for the plant, and has acquired title to fifty acres of water frontage. The mills will be operated from a single power house, electricity to be used entirely. It is planned to have the first mill of the four in operation in January next.

KILL BIENNIAL ELECTION IDEA IN LEGISLATURE

House Puts Quietus for Present on Attempt to Change System.

HOLMAN STAID TO FINISH

The biennial elections idea gave its last gasp yesterday in the Legislature and expired. Representative Samuel M. Holman, Republican, of Attleboro, sat up with it to the end.

Several resolves providing for amendments to the Constitution, establishing biennial elections, had been reported back from the Committee on Constitutional Amendments with a recommendation that they be "referred to the next General Court." Mr. Holman made a speech.

Against his remonstrances, the House accepted the recommendation by an overwhelming vote.

"The 'ayes' have it," said the Speaker, "and the report is accepted."

"Mr. Speaker," said Holman, "I respectfully doubt the vote and call for its verification by a roll call."

In order to get a roll call more than thirty members must stand and remain standing until the tellers have counted noses. Only nine others arose with Holman of Attleboro. A roll call was then refused.

Doorkeeper Tom Pedrick rang for the legislative ambulance and biennial elections was carried off to the morgue.

PILGRIMS TO PRACTICE IN CINCINNATI TO-DAY

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

A. H. C. Mitchell, Baseball Expert for the Boston American.

WEST BADEN SPRINGS, Ind., March 30.—Twenty-two members of the Boston American League team, in charge of Cy Young, left here early this morning for Cincinnati. They were not sorry to leave West Baden Springs, which will forever be associated in their minds with the tragedy that robbed them of their friend and leader, Chick Stahl. In Cincinnati they will see new sights and in roaming the streets will be able to get their minds off the terrible death of Stahl.

This afternoon they will all go out to the Cincinnati ball park and do practicing. They have not had their uniforms on since Thursday morning and then only for ten minutes. Some of them have not thrown a ball since Wednesday. It is a certainty that the men have slowed up and it will take a day or two or three before they can expect to get back into the condition they were in at the time of Thursday's calamity.

There was a game scheduled at Indianapolis to-day, but Cy Young, after consulting with some of the older members of the team, decided to cancel it. The team has not been notified of the day that Stahl will be buried.

When they boarded the train this morning there were conflicting reports. On one hand was a dispatch from Stahl's brother, Perry, who said he was late in arriving at Fort Wayne with the body and that the funeral would probably take place on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. On the other hand, the Cincinnati club officials telephoned that they had information from Fort Wayne that the ceremoy would take place this afternoon. Later in the day the question will be straightened out. In the meantime the players will practice at Cincinnati.

If the funeral takes place this afternoon it will be impossible for any members of the team to be present, as they cannot get to Fort Wayne in time. It was intended to have two or three of Stahl's team mates go to the funeral to represent the club.

With the burial taking place to-day the Boston Club will fulfil its engagements at Cincinnati on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday and then continue on to the cities where other exhibition games have been arranged. Of course, the two games scheduled for Fort Wayne will be cancelled. In view of Stahl's death it would be bad taste to play in his home town. Oberlin and Pruitt went home for a day, leaving ahead of the team, but they will rejoin it at Cincinnati.

In case the funeral takes place on Sunday the Boston Club will not play Cincinnati on that day. The Cincinnati Club has arranged to have the Dayton team fill in in case Boston has to cancel. For the first time since Stahl's death the players showed signs of cheerfulness today. As long as they remained at West Baden they could not help thinking of the sad affair, but once on the train they grew brighter. It will be many a day, however, before the memory of the stay at the Springs is effaced.

President John I. Taylor is not expected to reach Chicago until some time to-day. All definite plans for the immediate future are held in abeyance until he joins his players. He is expected to get into telephonic communication with the club soon after the team arrives in Cincinnati. The players will be quartered at the Havlin, a new hotel, in the centre of the town.

HALF-MILE KITE-SHAPED TRACK LATEST ON DOCKET FOR THE RIVER SPEEDWAY

By EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

A half-mile kite-shaped track at the Charles River Speedway. This is the latest on the docket for the thousands of road and speedway drivers of Greater Boston. Unless present plans fail the proposed course will be completed in time for the matinee racing of next year.

That portion of the speedway running from the half-mile wire, opposite the "Mets" clubhouse, toward Cambridge will be used for quite a distance, then the large turn of the kite track will be made out to the bank of the Charles River, and the return made along the water edge to the starting point.

This ideal proposition came about through William B. de las Casas, chairman of the Metropolitan Park Commissioners, telling the officials of the "Mets" that the increased interest in the matinees over the speedway was crowding the upper road, or, as it is named the Soldiers Road, and an appropriation had been made for a return drive for those in the races to use.

In looking over the ground, however, it was seen that by only swinging the return drive a little wider at the far end a perfect half-mile kite track could be had with barely little more expense than it would cost to build just a return drive next to the speedway.

After thoroughly considering the scheme President C. H. Belleden and his associate officials of the "Mets," decided to carry their plan to Mr. de las Casas for his opinion of the project. Instantly he perceived the feasibility of the kite track, and how easily it was obtainable. Edwin U. Curtis of the Metropolitan Park Commissioners, too, enthusiastically favored it.

The whole avdantages of the track can only be told in years to come. However true it may be, there is a feeling in certain quarters that Readville race track is liable to pass out of existence, and more specially will this be so if in the next few years the conditions are such that only a grand circuit meeting can be held every season. With the large racing plant not paying expenses those back of it will likely become weary of the drain on them, and the future prospects no better than the past.

In this case the Boston Gentlemen's Driving Club would be left without a home. Then there would be no suitable place to hold the Summer weekly matinees. What untold benefit then would be derived by the half-mile kite track at Charles River Speedway! The Boston Club could immediately transfer their matinees from Readville track to the speedway, and racing at the latter place would be held the year around.

At present the membership of the "Mets" is over 400, and with the influx from the Boston Club and the horde of outside horsemen who would be impressed with the kite track, the Charles River speedway would daily be the scene of exciting racing, watched by thousands of spectators, which would mean then a 1,500 membership for the "Mets."

The kite track means the greatest boom in speedway sport imaginable. It cannot come too soon to please local horsemen. The kindly attitude of the Metropolitan Park Commissioners toward the speedway drivers has been most gratifying to the speedway devotees, and the position of the commissioners on the matter in hand will boost their popularity away above par were it not already clear to the limit.

O'ROURKE SIGNS BIG FELLOWS

NEW YORK, March 30.—Matchmaker Tom O'Rourke of the National Sporting Club of this city has made a big hit with the general sporting public by matching Joe Jeannette, the clever colored light heavyweight champion of this city, and Sam McVey of Los Angeles, Cal., for the star bout at his shown on April 15.

Both of these two men have been trailing on the corns of Jack Johnson, the present colored champion, and both have fought him to a standstill. Jeannette is a fast, clever boxer, and has a good punch with either hand, as his recent fifteen-round draw with Johnson shows.

Both men have started to train for the contest, which promises to be a warm one.

THOMAS WILL FIGHT LEWIS

NEW YORK, March 30.—Joe Thomas, the hard-hitting San Francisco fighter who has been cleaning up all the good men in this section of late, and Willie Lewis of this city were matched last night at the Hotel Bartholdi.

The condition under which Harry Foley for Thomas and Dan McKetrick for Lewis agreed are that the men weigh in at 150 pounds at 3 p. m. on the day of the contest, which must be inside of two weeks.

Bids will be accepted until Tuesday next by Harry Foley, who will then decide what distance the men will box.

YALE WINS EASILY.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Yale put it all over George Washington University, the score at the conclusion of the contest standing 17 to 5 in favor of the visitors.

BOSTON NATIONALS WILL FINISH THEIR TRAINING AT SOUTH END GROUNDS

It is expected that the remains of Harry (Cosey) Dolan, the right fielder of the Boston Nationals, who died at Louisville yesterday morning of typhoid fever, will reach this city late to-night over the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, in charge of his wife, who was at his bedside in the hospital when he died.

By reason of Dolan's death the Boston Nationals have cancelled all their games in the South, and are now on their way to this city to attend the funeral of their departed comrade in a body. The Tenneyites will do all the rest of their practice at the South End grounds, and exhibition games may be arranged with such teams as Lynn and New Bedford.

It is expected that Clarence Beaumont will join the Hub team in this city.

OUTFIELDER DOLAN HAD REMARKABLE CAREER ON DIAMOND

Harry Dolan, the departed member of the Boston Nationals, was regarded one of the best inside ball players in the country. Manager Fred Tenney is of the opinion that he had few equals in this style of play in the country. The local team counted much on Dolan's help this season, and they were shocked to hear the news of his death.

Dolan was a product of Cambridge, where he played with amateur teams up to the Spring of 1894, when he was given a try-out in the box by the Fall River team of the New England League. He was released to Portland. At the close of the season he was signed by the Boston Nationals.

He remained with the South End team during the seasons of 1895 and 1896, when he was released to Springfield. His pitching with Springfield attracted the attention of Captain Anson, who bought him for the Chicago Nationals. Later he joined Brooklyn, but when the American Leage expanded Dolan went to the Chicago White Sox. In 1903 Comisky traded Dolan to Cincinnati for George Magoon. He remained with the Reds until mid-season of 1905, when he was secured by the Boston Nationals.

Dolan was married August 24, 1902, to Miss Frances M. Duffy at Chicago. Mrs Dolan was at her husband's bedside when he passed away.

DORCHESTER DRIVING CLUB WANTS A FAIR DEAL

At the weekly meeting of the Dorchester Driving Club the principal topic under discussion was the best means to adopt in bringing the National Trotting Association to recognize the ruling of the American Trotting Association in permitting driving clubs to hold ten days' racing each year in which admission can be charged at the gate, but the horses performing not to have the penalty of a record.

Several years ago the National passed a rule allowing amateur driving clubs in membership with the League of Amateur Driving Clubs to hold each season a meeting of three days' duration, wherein horses gained no records, but this ruling only permits of a single driving club in New England—the Boston—reaping the advantages offered.

Not Pure Amateurs.

All of the semi-professional clubs, similar to the Dorchesters, are not eligible to membership in the League of Amateur Driving Clubs, hence the National's rule relating to the latter organization avails them nothing, but were the National to agree to abide by the American interpretation of allowing all driving clubs the right of ten days' racing, nearly a hundred clubs in New England would be benefited in place of only the one named.

At the May meeting of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association in New York the question comes up for action. It is on this account the Dorchesters have decided to make every effort to bring about the favorable verdict they so greatly desire. Other driving clubs, under the same standard as themselves, are to be corresponded with, and with a united front it is hoped the American ruling will be accepted for the driving clubs in this section.

In all fairness such ought to be the case. It would be the cause of one of the best booms in the sport of club racing ever gained. Then, too, it would open up the wisdom of racing horses at different distances than a mile in all events on the tracks.

With no opportunity of the horses getting records or bars, races could be held at five, five and a half, six and seven furlongs, as well as a mile, and a mile and a quarter, etc. For many horses the distance of a mile is too far for their best efforts. In this way those which have the best ability for racing between half a mile and a mile can find a place suitable for them. Starting sprinters in five furlong events is sure to bring about hotly contested races that would arouse the spectators to intense enthusiasm.

Rule Is Unfair.

In all reason, if it is right for the Boston Gentlemen's Driving Club to hold a three-days' meeting for prizes and charging gate admission, with the horses remaining free of penalty, then why is it not just as reasonable for the Dorchesters, Lynns, Worcesters, and a host of other driving clubs to have the same privileges?

The National cannot afford to make flesh of one and fish of all the other clubs, and be fair in its ruling. There is a move on tap now by the Rochester, N. H., club to hold a New England Day over their home track, to which all driving clubs are to be invited to participate. This is expected to come off the latter part of June. It only requires the National Trotting Association to agree to abide by the ruling made by the American for the affair to be a wonderful success.

SCHRECK MEETS WILLE APRIL 15

CHICAGO, March 30.—Mike Schreck and his manager Billy Hogan met Jack Curley, the manager for John Wille, and in a short time all details for the Tonopah match was arranged. Wille's party will leave for the battle ground to-night and Schreck and Hogan will leave Sunday night.

The men will fight for a percentage of the gate receipts, a winner's and loser's end, on April 15, before Mike Riley's Casino Club of Tonopah, Nevada. While no title hinges on the result of the battle it will be a starting point to sift out for a heavyweight to either take the place of retired Champion James J. Jeffries, or if the big ex-champion decides to return to the ring it will make an oppenent for him. No referee has yet been named for the Wille-Schreck battle, as all the minor details will be arranged when the principals reach the battle ground.

CONNER AND POEHLER WIN.

Quiet "Chuck" Conner and his partner, Paul Poehler, last night won the two-men team tournament for the candlepin championship of New England at Murray & Irwin's alleys. Conner and Poehler won the first prize of $45, with a four-string total of 832. The second prize, $25, went to O'Brien and Christopher with 804; third prize, $15, was collected by "Chuck" Conner, who was also teamed with Spillane, while Burdett and Cole, scoring 803, took the fourth prize, $10.

NAPS ALREADY IN HARD LUCK

MACON, Ga., March 30.—The Cleveland baseball team is already up against it hard. Lajoie is lame, Hinchman has a sore toe which may require an operation. Turner is afflicted with a stiff neck; Birmingham's arm was injured so badly yesterday that he may be out of it for months, Bradley had an abscess on his neck, Bay has a bad knee and Flick is still in the North.

Vice-President Somers in response to telegrams asking for players, wired to-day as follows:

"It now looks as if we would soon be buying players instead of selling them."

ERIN CRADLE OF CHAMPIONS

No. 9, Nelson Series—Great are the Irish, says Battling Nelson, in the ninth of his series of articles written for the BOSTON AMERICAN. Nelson, just back from a trip to Europe, says Ireland, as compared with France, is as a lyddite shell to a firecracker.. He predicts the Irish will rule England and produce champions of the future. Article No. 9 follows:

BY BATTLING NELSON.

I visited two other countries on my trip abroad besides my native country of Denmark, where I made a special study of conditions as they affect boxing.

First I went to France and later to Ireland.

A greater contrast between two lands could not be found.

Ireland is as much different from France as New Orleans is to Uppernavik.

First let me tell you about France.

There's a country that is all in so far as the punch goes.

There isn't a native fighter in all the land that would rank with a good third-rater over here.

It's astonishing that a land which was once famed for its military prowess cannot produce one good boxer in a generation.

The soldiers of Napoleon lost their fighting spirit at Waterloo.

Since then France has been out of business as a nation of scrappers.

She has become an easy-going country, fond of luxuries and entertainment.

FAULTS OF THE FRENCH.

Here are some plainly apparent facts about France:

The people over there drink too much wine.

They go to bed too near sunrise.

They sip too much absinthe and smoke too many cigarettes.

I give this criticism with the best of intentions.

The people of France made a big hit with me.

They are polite, well educated and every one minds his or her own business.

But I'm afraid France is down and out as far as fighting goes.

Fighters can't be bred under conditions as they exist there now.

The whole country of France is like a big park.

It's like a big playground, where the children are white-haired, with curling mustaches, and wear top hats. The women are like a lot of animated bisque dolls.

That's the impression I got in France.

I went to see some boxing matches.

Well, it was rather pitiable.

The boxers were of such poor class that they couldn't even get a preliminary engagement in England. So they crossed the channel and became stars in Paris.

POOR CLASS OF FIGHTERS.

I believe little Abe Attell, our bantam champion, could easily whip any heavyweight in France.

I didn't see any of the fights where they are allowed to kick. That game is dying out. It was too impolite for the French, and now our methods revamped and with as Alphonse and Gaston polish have been adopted.

If you have money then France is no place for you.

If you try to follow their pace it will kill you.

On the other hand, if you haven't any money or don't want to spend what you've got, France is no place for you.

It's great for a week.

Then I advise you to pull up your stakes and hike for somewhere else.

That's what we did.

We said good-by to the boulevards, the parks, the cafes and the theatres and started for Ireland.

Ireland!

Ah! There is the one grand, green little spot.

Ireland to France is like comparing a lyddite shell to a cannon cracker.

There is virility in every rock, hill and lake in the Emerald Isle.

COUNTRY OF CHAMPIONS.

The whole country is chock full of undeveloped Sullivans, McGoverns and McAuliffes.

Prize fighting never was a national pastime over there.

That is the only reason why there are not a dozen strapping gossoons headed for these parts to try for the laurels worn by Jeffries.

England would like to raise good fighters but can't.

Ireland could raise regiments of unbeatable fighters, but doesn't care to.

She has no ambition that way.

It's only when they get over here and see the possibilities that they go in for scrappers.

Call an Irishman a liar, consider yourself signed at once for the battle of your life.

Tell him there's a big lot of money in sight if he will punch some other fellow's head off, and he can't see it.

"I never saw the fellow. Why should I hurt him. What would any one pay to see us fight for when we haven't any grudge?" he will answer.

IRISH ARE GRUDGE FIGHTERS.

That's the whole secret.

The Irish are grudge fighters.

If you want to fight them you've got to make them mad first.

There is immense energy and resourcefulness stored up among the Irish.

It wouldn't surprise me a bit if they rule all England in another hundred years.

Millions of them will move over into England.

Then they will begin getting all of the good offices. After awhile all the newly appointed lords will be Irish.

I say this with all earnestness.

I don't mean that Parliament will be moved to Dublin, but I do mean that Ireland is the more dominant race, and its forcefulness and virility are bound to make it a great nation in time.

The next fighting nation will be the Irish.

JAPS ARE NOT BOXERS.

I don't believe that Japan will ever produce any great fighters in the boxing game.

They are too small. They have no reach. They are great at jiu-jitsu, but they lack the snappy knockout punch.

Ireland is full of huskies.

I have great admiration for them as a people and as fighters.

They make the best policemen in the world. They have the weight, the punch and the fighting spirit.

Their champions are the most popular in the world. I have found them the hardest people to lick I have ever met.

Smashing the Piano Trust

We Licked the Combination in 22 Cities Lately

Our agents swooped down upon 22 New England cities, armed with Uncle Sam's best ammunition—good old greenbacks—and bought every Trust piano that they could lay their hands on. The poor small Piano Trust Dealers and agents who have been tied up to the combination, and who have been laying back to sell in a high trust market, got frightened at the strength we have shown in our fight with the Trust, and surrendered to us at prices that would make you laugh. They could not sell to the public at Trust prices because we were underselling them. The Trust would not buy the pianos back, so the poor victims threw Trust agreements, contracts and all to the winds and sold out to us at revenge prices. Just read the smashing we gave the Piano Trust in this last battle. We bought at battle prices 245 new Trust Pianos in the following cities:

PORTLAND, ME.	7 Pianos	FALL RIVER, MASS.	7 Pianos
BANGOR, ME.	3 Pianos	LAWRENCE, MASS.	10 Pianos
AUGUSTA, ME.	4 Pianos	WORCESTER, MASS.	22 Pianos
MANCHESTER, N. H.	8 Pianos	SPRINGFIELD, MASS.	18 Pianos
CONCORD, N. H.	6 Pianos	HAVERHILL, MASS.	11 Pianos
NASHUA, N. H.	7 Pianos	HARTFORD, CONN.	15 Pianos
ST. ALBANS, VT.	4 Pianos	NEW HAVEN, CONN.	22 Pianos
BURLINGTON, VT.	6 Pianos	NEW LONDON, CONN.	8 Pianos
MONTPELIER, VT.	3 Pianos	BRIDGEPORT, CONN.	7 Pianos
LOWELL, MASS.	11 Pianos	PROVIDENCE, R. I.	31 Pianos
LYNN, MASS.	16 Pianos	PAWTUCKET, R. I.	19 Pianos

Do you know what we are going to do? We are going to put The Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' sacrifice tag on every one of them and scatter them throughout N. E. at No Profit Prices. We will scatter them as seeds among the people that they may produce a knowledge of intelligent piano buying—every one we sell will prove to the public that the Trust has been charging from 200 to 400 per cent. more for their pianos than the moral law allows. Buy your piano from us; no matter what make you want we have it. Help us to fight the Trust and we will make it worth your while. Call if you can and call early.

Men, Women, Children—TAKE CARE OF YOUR TEETH

They Will Take Care of You. They Will Prolong Your Life. They Are Your Most Important Tools

You would laugh at a carpenter who allowed his saws and chisels and other tools to rust. You would refuse to pity him if you heard him weeping and complaining because he couldn't work well and make a decent living with rusty tools.

You would say to him, "Fool, why did you not take care of those tools? Why did you let them go to wrack and ruin?"

And you would talk in the same way to the careless farmer who leaves his agricultural machinery out in the Winter storms and finds it ruined in the Spring.

But, reader, the man who neglects his TEETH is far more foolish than the carpenter or the farmer who neglects his tools. For, if the worst comes to the worst, the carpenter can buy a set of tools just as good or even better.

BUT YOU CAN NEVER GET BACK THOSE TEETH WHEN ONCE YOU HAVE LOST THEM.

It is a most unfortunate thing for this country that nine-tenths of the people haven't the knowledge or the energy to protect their teeth, and that only a very small percentage know enough to protect the teeth OF THEIR CHILDREN.

There is nothing more idiotic on earth than to see parents worrying about the looks of their children's clothes, while allowing their teeth, that would protect them all their lives, to go to ruin.

You know by sad experience how much power there is in your jaw if you ever bit your tongue.

You know that because of the extraordinary power in your jaw YOU CAN CHEW INDEFINITELY WITHOUT GETTING TIRED, WHEREAS ALL OTHER EXERCISES MAKE YOU TIRED. This is part of Nature's efforts to save your stomach.

Remember that whatever your teeth DO NOT DO your stomach MUST DO. Every particle of food that is changed by your body into blood and flesh and bone HAS GOT TO BE REDUCED TO IMPALPABLE POWDER. If you don't do this with your teeth your stomach must do it, and nine men out of ten ruin their health, destroy their stomachs and cut twenty or thirty good years off their lives because they are not sensible enough to let their teeth do their work and save the stomach from work that it should not do.

We have talked to you before about chewing thoroughly. Just now we want once again to interest all of our readers, and especially those responsible for the care of children, in protection of the teeth themselves.

There is no use of telling a man to chew IF HE HASN'T GOT ANY GOOD TEETH. It is impossible to keep people from eating hastily, swallowing their food half whole, if their teeth are in bad condition.

For the benefit of our readers we propose to do once more just what we did some years ago. We have engaged the services of one of the best dentists in the country. Certainly there is no more thoroughly scientific man than the doctor who has been good enough to prepare for our readers five short articles on the teeth that we shall print on the home page, beginning to-day. These articles explain how your teeth should be cared for. They give information as to the care of children's teeth. We want every one of our readers to study them, cut them out and keep them.

Meanwhile we will tell you this—the best life insurance in the world is good teeth. Over and over, when you see some man who has kept alive and vigorous longer than ordinary, you hear also casually mentioned the fact that HIS TEETH ARE IN PERFECT CONDITION. Of course they are. If they had not been he would have been dead long before.

You want A GOOD TOOTH BRUSH.

You want A GOOD TOOTH POWDER.

You want A GOOD MOUTH WASH that will destroy the germs that attack the teeth in the mouth.

You ought to know how to use these things, AND YOU OUGHT TO USE THEM EVERY DAY OF YOUR LIFE.

You ought to go and take your children every six months at least to consult an honest, competent dentist. You ought to realize that toothpicks, besides being criminally indecent, destroy the gums and the teeth. Waxed dental floss should be used.

Information that will enable you to protect your own teeth and those of your children we shall print for you in our series of five articles. We sincerely hope that they will do some good.

No one can imagine the amount of suffering that poor little babies have gone through on this earth during the teething period, WHICH IS THE PERIOD OF GREATEST MORTALITY AMONG HUMAN BEINGS.

A knowledge of a few simple facts would help to mitigate the sufferings of babyhood and to increase health every year thereafter.

Well, We Are Getting On

Few Kings or Emperors Do the Thing Better Than Mr. Roosevelt

The President's sons are learning to jump horses over fences. They are going about the thing in the right way, just as it should be done.

Their regular teachers are Baron Sternburg, the German Ambassador to the United States, and Captain Fitzhugh Lee of the Seventh United States Cavalry. These lessons have fixed times.

We presume that at the same moment Admiral Dewey and some competent ship captain are down by the little pond behind the White House teaching the younger children to sail a toy boat.

We all remember with pardonable patriotic pride how one of the American men-of-war was used as a private yacht to take the President's daughter to see the yacht races, how another American man-of-war was made into a floating day nursery at Oyster Bay.

There was a time when the Old World could boast of sights and scenes unknown to us. That time has gone by.

We used to look at the picture called "The Education of a Prince," in which a little royal child was playing with its toys, guided, instructed and toadied by gray-haired Ministers of State down on their hands and knees.

We used to reflect bitterly that we probably could never have such a pleasant sight as that in America.

But, to the universal delight, we have just that at present and still tter promised.

We are recovering from foolish, ultra ideas of democracy and blican government. And if we go on, we shall soon be able to hold eads up with the subjects of the Kaiser, or the Czar, or the Sultan key himself.

Americans time and they can do almost everything.

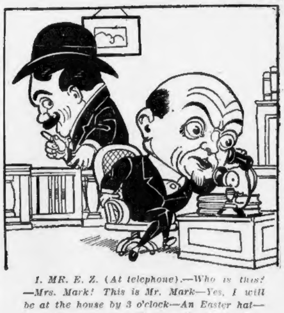
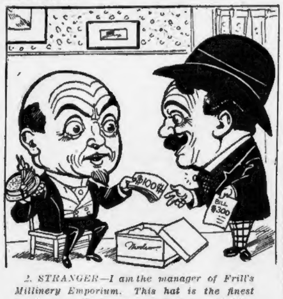
E. Z. MARK BUYS AN EASTER HAT

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner



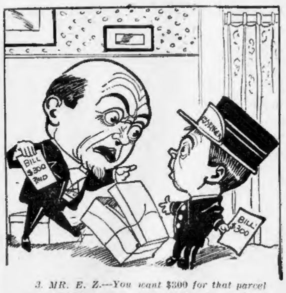
1. MR. E. Z. (At telephone).—Who is this?—Mrs. Mark! This is Mr. Mark—Yes, I will be at the house by 3 o'clock—An Easter hat—Pay the messenger—How much—$300!—Holy Smoke!—Well, all right—Good-by, dear.

STRANGER (To himself)—That looks like a chance for $300 E. Z. money for Yours Truly. Ta, ta, until this afternoon.

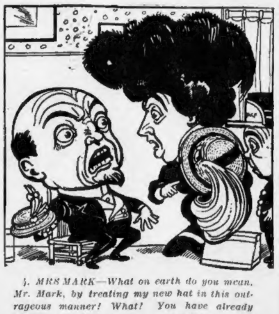


2. STRANGER—I am the manager of Frill's Millinery Emporium. This hat is the finest specimen of Easter wear we had on exhibition—in fact I selected it myself in Paris—and I did not dare trust so valuable an article to the ordinary messenger.

MR. E. Z.—Pardon me for insisting on your opening the parcel, but I cannot take any risks in such matters. It seems to be all right, and here are your $300.



3. MR. E. Z.—You want $300 for that parcel from Frill's, when I have already received Mrs. Mark's hat, and paid the manager himself! You'd better be careful if you are trying to work any bunco game on ME, young man! Get out now, before I call the police!



4. MRS MARK—What on earth do you mean, Mr. Mark, by treating my new hat in this outrageous manner! What! You have already paid a man $300 for that impossible creation which anybody with a thimbleful of brains could see never cost over $2! E. Z., you've been done AGAIN!

The Daily Drill

(From the War Diary of a Commuter)

MARCH, 1907—Our army headquarters and exercise ground is known as the Terminal. We call it the Limit. It is a fine place.

Canned air and heavy dust cakes are the rations for those who must wait for their cars and trains to do something.

Loaded to their eyelashes with suburban baggage, the rough riders from the neighboring plains, all in fatigue dress, cool their heels on the windswept platforms. Presently the dauntless captain of the Third Rail Side-steppers heaves into view—a sprightly two-hundred pounder, always honk-honking to himself the popular road refrain:

> "He who rides and gets away
> Will live to ride another day."

Above the shrieking din and riot the signal for the drill is given. The effect is magical.

"All aboard for the Sardine Accommodation!" The hurry order comes from the throat of the colored porter, the pride of the road. Though he has been railroading for twenty years he has never cost the company a cent in wages.

Instantly Fort No. 1, as the first coach is called in suburban military circles, becomes the scene of attack. The Cambridge Light Infantry soon scale the steps, and easily throwing aside a division of the Wellesley daughters of the regiment, take possession of the seats. The first manoeuvre is a brilliant success, thanks to long practice.

In the meantime the Radcliffe First Aid is on the job. But at the heart of the firing line the battle drill rages fiercest. The Charlestown Sappers and Miners are deploying for the smoker, while the South commuters almost turn their right flank when they stumble over the low fortifications of dress suit cases manned by the Conservatory Amazons.

Blank oaths follow in terrific rapidity. The Third Railers bring their two-hundred pounder of a captain into action. His very first impact knocks a Railroad Commissioner off his feet. This bit of fun, so out of place in the grim business of the place, livens things up a bit and demoniacal laughter rents the near-air.

While this drill is at its height, a file of foxy Jamaica Plaintiffs, veteran guerillas, are boring their way steadily to the smoker. Just at the moment when the Roxbury Strapegists are about to enter and take seats, lo and behold! every seat is taken by the Jamaicas. In sheer chagrin the Roxes try to bite their straps.

Out of the dust bank and the fog the Sardine pushes its gleaming nose. Afar the suburbs twinkle through the hazy twilight and the talcum powder signal.

As the battered troops roll into their respective armories wild cheers greet the brave survivors.

At the lonely Cottage Farms turnpike an old man stood waiting for his only boy to come home. The last car had let off its solitary passenger, but it was not the old man's son.

With a firm clutch of the cane he had been leaning on, the lonely old man turned and started for his home. He paused for a moment and, looking up to the stars overhead, said: "Thank Heaven, my boy is safe to-night. He must be walking home."

She Says Home Is the Earthly Expression of What We May Expect Awaits Us After Death

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

FOR what are you living?

For what are you working?

To make a home, and gain the comforts of life for those dear to you?

Perhaps you are a husband, or a wife or a parent.

If you are no one of these, you are a son or daughter or brother or sister; then, what are you doing to make those who are nearest to you happy and contented?

I do not mean to ask what material things you are bestowing upon them.

Material things give no happiness, unless they supplement other blessings.

Is your presence in your home a benediction and a joy?

Do those nearest you look for your coming, and regret your going?

If not, why not?

Heaven Begins on Earth

HOME is the earthly expression of what we will find waiting for us after death.

Just as we fashion our homes here, by our mental attitude, so we will find them ready for us when we pass on. And heaven must begin on earth. Here must the foundation be laid. All the hard work and money you may be putting into your home will never give happiness unless you are loving the inhabitants of that home, and showing your love in words and acts, in self-control and patience.

If you are letting the fretful tone and the irritable mood and the nervous habit destroy the comfort of your household you are wasting the whole effort of your life, the effort to bestow happiness.

If you sit down to a gloomy table, where despondency and ill temper prevent sociability, you might better stand in the bread line now, and take your repast in the park. There, at least, you would not depress others by your presence.

The Unhappy Home

IF a man prepared a bower of beauty for his family and then introduced a swarm of mosquitoes and carefully bred the insect so that the bower was never free from them, you would think him a fool or a lunatic.

Yet many a man and many a woman do a similar act by building and furnishing a beautiful residence and filling it with irritability, petty tempers and selfishness.

Irritating trifles present themselves to every life. They await us at every corner along the journey.

They should be treated as trifles, and brushed aside; not dignified to the position of tragedies, and permitted to destroy the peace of a household, to shadow feasts and darken the hours of repose with bitter memories.

Worse Than Useless

MONEY, education, position, power—all are worse than useless unless they bring helpfulness and happiness to others.

To do this they must be supplemented by affection, good will, self-control. Though you give to your family all the advantages wealth can offer you are worse than a highwayman if you deprive your household of peace, love and contentment in the family circle.

Take mental stock of yourself and see what sort of a husband and father you are.

See if you could not better live for those you love by giving less labor and money and more good will, patience and affection.

Disconsolate

By Wex Jones

A POOR little chicken looked gloomy and glum,
Instead of all fluffy and flip,
And feebly it cheeped, "Oh, this world's on the bum,"
For the poor little thing had the pip,
The pip-ip-ip-ip,
The poor little thing had the pip.

THE sun was as bright as a new-minted dime,
But that drooping wee chick wouldn't skip;
It was having the mournfullest possible time,
For the poor little thing had the pip,
The pip-ip-ip-ip,
The poor little thing had the pip.

SO don't think the world is a dismal old place,
If mayhap you have loosened your grip;
The sun's shining still; get a smile on your face,
And never give in to the pip,
The pip-ip-ip-ip,
No, never give in to the pip.
